

10 Reasons Financial Accountability Brings Freedom

By Gregory Gibson

1 – Financial accountability creates guardrails for your heart

2 – Financial accountability creates guardrails for your spending

3 – Financial accountability allows you to steward every penny that God owns and has allowed you to steward

4 – Financial accountability highlights the areas you need development in stewarding resources (stewardship is defined as turning what God owns into more)

5 – Financial accountability allows you to live in your giftings (especially if it is not with finances)

6 – Financial accountability brings trust from others, your team, and your church... and even those who partner with you

7 – Financial accountability allows you to make healthy decisions moving forward (budgets, buildings, and people)

8 – Financial accountability allows you to live above reproach

9 – Financial accountability frees you to focus on vine work (prayer, evangelism, discipleship, preaching the Word, etc)

10 – Financial accountability helps you create clear records (both for yourself, your team, your church, your partners, and the government)
