1 - Your post must answer the 4 questions from the winner's writing process

Who am I talking to?

Here I am talking to 25- 60-year-old Working Men who are bad when it comes to dating and want to improve their dating game.

Where are they now?

They are emotionally weak, sad, maybe depressed because they are lonely, and cannot do anything fun because they don't have a partner to enjoy that with. They dream of getting the perfect girl that they know each other going on vacations dating having a good time together. They might picture them teasing her playfully in their mind now and then. Every cute girl they pass by makes them feel bad inside because they didn't approach her, they didn't have the confidence to talk to her.

What do I want them to do? What objective do I want to achieve with them?

I want to get them on an assessment call with my client for her to analyze what is blocking him from getting the girl he desires. From there giving him her product which is a course to learn how to date girls.

What are the steps they need to experience to take this action?

They need to think that this is achievable. (If he can do it why can't I?). He wants to hear Just watch these videos for 30 minutes a day you'll find your ideal girl in just few days. Subject Line : How many more time?...

I remember driving home late at night, driving my friend and colleague back home. I threw my backpack and coat carelessly on the backseats.

We landed somehow on the dating topic and I mentioned how I was trying to look for a solution. I have set up a date with a girl online the next day. I was nervous.

As soon as I stopped talking, he jumped in talking about how he uses some program he found online to learn flirting, to set up multiple dates and how life was getting better for him.

It was true, we have been working for a while now. I always wondered from where he started to get these ideas. The other day I was flabbergasted when he came with a girl that's a 10 to movie with me.

"Of course..." - I muttered under my breath. I knew he loved talking and trying these courses online. I didn't really think it was worth it, I have already tried those in the past but failed.

And that only I was the problem.

He must have heard me, as he finished telling me about it, and after a sigh of what could only be despair he said

- "You know, maybe you should give it a try. What's the worst that could happen?"

Trying to argue my excuses we soon arrived in his neighborhood. As I was going to make the final turn, I caught the corner of my eyes. He was texting me a website link.

I guess out of tiredness I did not pay much attention to it. I needed some sleep.

As I stopped by the front porch, he calmly left my car and leaned on the window:

- "Thanks for driving me home, man." - he then contemplated for 2 seconds - "I think tomorrow things might change for you. Good luck with your date."
