

Python for Absolute Beginners: Variables and Data Types
Quiz and Homework

Integer: A number without a decimal point.

Float: A number with a decimal point.

String: A sequence of whitespace characters encased in either single or double quotation marks.

print(): Prints out to the console log.

type(): Determines the type of data, usually used with print() input(): Allows the user to give input.

What is the difference between an integer and a float?

What function would you use to determine the data type of any given number?

How can you write multiline strings using Python?

What is the advantage of an f string?

Python for Absolute Beginners: Variables and Data Types
Quiz and Homework

How do you wrap a variable inside of an f string?
