

Aeren Chapman

Fill up your lungs, feel better. Look, it's you, good as new. New hands, new throat, new living tissue.

One of three S/Is for The Magnus Archives because I am incorrigible in my habit of picking up the entire cast of a series and walking away with it. This one in particular is shipped with Tim Stoker and Gerry Keay romantically, as well as most other canon Magnus Institute researchers platonically.

Info

Name: Aeren Chapman

Nicknames/Aliases: Death (former)

Pronouns: they/them

Occupation: None (cannot work as they are deceased on paper)

Likes: Video games, puns, big hoodies, quiet places

Dislikes: Crowds, the Magnus Institute, approximately 75% of their relatives

Entity Affiliation: The End

Legally speaking, Aeren Chapman died three years before Jonathan Sims took his position as the Head Archivist of the Magnus Institute. This is true. To hear the few people they interact with nowadays tell it, they stumbled out from under a footbridge in London a few months prior with no idea where they were and nowhere to go, saved only by the good fortune of locating a relative nearby who didn't ask too many questions. This is also true. They ask you to ignore the wounds they're always covered in. "I'm okay," they say. "I just pissed off something way more powerful than me, and I'm payin' for it."