The Undercover Prince

Everybody dreams of being royalty. Everybody fantasizes about it. Everyone wants to be 'treated like royalty'.

But would you, really? Would you? Really?

Imagine having every single day of your life photographed, video-taped, recorded and documented from the second of your birth. Imagine having to explain, defend or moderate every single activity or action you did, just because 'that's not how royalty acts!'. Imagine everyone speaking to you, or not acting around you, in a particular way, just because of who you are. Everybody staring at you. Everybody trying to know you. Everybody wanting to be you, or be with you, with you living in a fish-bowl of rampant inquiry and speculation...

Are you imagining that?

Good. Then you can probably imagine why Leo loves going around as incognito as possible, hiding his identity from as many people as he can. This is why he likes to spend so much time traveling, serving, meeting new people, having new loves, and studying and living in foreign countries, with his real identity buried deep down inside him.

He has been wandering ever since his home, the faction of Leamas, was destroyed and taken over by the mist. His dragon perished in the onslaught helping him escape. Leaving him not only physically scared but mentally.
