Fundraising for Kids Like Jonathan

Introduction

"Lion Paws" is a charitable program aimed at providing support and assistance to sick children and their families. The program works to improve the lives of children who are facing serious health challenges by providing them with access to medical care, medications, and other necessary resources.

Through this program, sick children are given a chance to receive treatment and care that they may not otherwise have access to. The program is named after the strength and courage of the lion, symbolizing the bravery and resilience that these children possess.

The Lion Paws program is a wonderful example of how people can come together to make a positive difference in the lives of those in need. It is through the generosity of volunteers and donors that the program is able to continue to provide vital support to children and families during difficult times.

Reference:

Jonathan Zhao, 16, Pine Wood school. Excels both at soccer and at school, was diagnosed as CAEBV, a very rare disease, the 1st case at Stanford Children's Hospital history. He went through 3 rounds of chemotherapy which were aimed at bone marrow transplant but unfortunately all failed and resulted in worse conditions, including admissions by ICU 2 times, 37 days in total. He is now at high risk with several important organs that can hardly tolerate any new pressures due to extra or severe medications. Permitted by the hospital, oriental medicine, qigong, food therapy etc., uncovered by insurance, are also integrated into the current treatment plans. Both his parents are taking care of him, full time.
