

Federal Judge Babbles

U.S. District Judge Raner Collins babbled mysteriously:¹

... Ten years ago ... Something happened, and there's no shame in the fact that something happened. Things happen to people all the time. ... You have to learn to deal with it. People have to deal with stuff all the time. Sometimes you deal with stuff by taking [psychiatric] medication. It makes things better. ...

I do not know what he is talking about. What is psychiatric medication supposed to “make better” in my case? What “stuff” is it supposed to help me “deal with”? What supposedly happened ten years ago? I asked him to clarify, but he failed to articulate any clarification.
