

Fit Happens — Privacy Policy

Last updated: 2026-07-04

Fit Happens is a Chrome extension for shoppers on tibi.com. This page explains what data it interacts with.

What Fit Happens reads

- Product and cart information from the tibi.com page you're currently viewing (product title, price, image, and cart contents), read directly from tibi.com's own page data. This is only ever read to display the panel — it is not sent anywhere except as described below.

What Fit Happens stores

- Admin-authored fit notes ("Asta's Take") and approved public fit summaries ("Fit Fam's Take") are stored in a backend database (Google Firestore) and displayed in the extension. This is product content, not personal data about you.
- Reviews you submit: if you use the "Submit your review" form, the tags and note text you enter are stored in the same backend, associated only with the product you reviewed. No name, email, account, or other identifying information is collected or attached to your submission.
- Panel position: the extension remembers where you last dragged its panel on screen. This is stored locally in your own browser (`chrome.storage.local`) and never leaves your device.

What Fit Happens does not do

- No accounts, sign-in, or user profiles.
- No tracking, analytics, or advertising.
- No sharing of data with third parties beyond the Google Firebase/Firestore infrastructure used to host the data described above.
