

My questions continuations...

The next thing is that I found two huge fence companies in LA, one is making vinyl fencing, and the next one is aluminium, like my client, so should be better to model them. But the thing is that they on their web page have many yt videos that are part of their winning writing process. The next problem I see in modeling any top players is that they have 170+ reviews on Google, trust pilot, etc. c but my client has only 4 on TrustFeed. But it's not that she has a young business, she had hundreds of thousands of good projects, and she wasn't asking for testimonials. So first question about modeling, when the more closed top players use yt videos how should I do it? Should I do a video to script or something else, my best guess is to use the rough structure of the vinyl top player and use some pieces of information from the second one. And my second part of modeling top players in this case, how can I back up all the claims when I don't have loads of testimonials? To this point, I was using showing our work, and logos of big B2B partners, but I am curious if there is a better way to do it. In this part of my problem quick question, when she finishes a project for a client, and they are happy with the fence, how should she ask for great reviews?

The third problem I have with my funnel is the traffic journey. I will not tell you in great detail about it, because I covered it in the Google doc, but from watching many many hot jar recordings I spot the most common behaviors. First, they are just scrolling, second, they go to the reviews section, then to the fence section where they are kinda lost, they go to the contact page where they are lost, then they come back to the fence page, and then they are gone completely. So the first problem I covered with making the copy of the home page shorter and using better headlines, but the next part is I don't exactly where the problem is. But my best guess is: that I have a few pages on the website home page, product pages, about, gallery, contact right. And the basic funnel is ad-> home page-> contact page-> conversion, right? But when readers need to more about me, the product, or whatever they go to other pages, my problem with fence pages is that are not optimized for the writing process, and it's hard to navigate, and with contact pages similar, that can be too complicated. So the solution is to make it easy to navigate and by modeling top players optimize the winning writing process, on all pages.

And the last question: Recently on 26 July I turned 18 years old, and it was a big thing for my family (not that big for me). And I am not a kid, and I really didn't want to, and don't like to get gifts, especially loads of expensive ones or loads of money, because I don't feel I earned it but it happened. I could be mad about it, but it is being retarded. I am not arrogant kid " GIVE ME MONEY or I WANT TO GET XYZ no matter!" So my question is what things I can invest in myself that will help me with copywriting work, like softawres, programs, or something else? I got $4k and to this point I bought a better laptop (1500$) that will make my work outside my home much better, because my old one was small. I also was thinking to improve my work office for better productivity. Also next 50% ($2k) of this money I want to use in some investment TRW campus. On this I have like $2k, and my questions is do you know maybe what would be better in my scenario; go to trading campus which is short term investment or to go to the crypto currency campus which is long term strategy? So based on those questions, and the Google doc where is a deeper analysis of what mistakes you spot in my funnel, that I don't see?

 - They don't know what to do on those pages
 - On the website
 - low curiosity - on the website I wasn't sparking curiosity in the headlines that can be why some people start losing interest in reading my copy
 - When people start seeing my CTA headline, the first thing they did was scroll up
 - People start clicking to the about us page where the copy is garbage and don't have any goal
 - when I saw hot jar recording I identify that for some people animations was messed up, so they didn't see any section
 - The mistake that I already fixed was email where people was sending forms, was on the admin email that is fairly hard to find, so client didn't see new leads, now it's fixed, but she lost 2 good leads on that
 - Design is good, one of the problems might be small headlines
 - Before launching this campaign I assumed that the K star fence is top player, so I modeled their copy. The thing is that they don't have as much reviews as some others, so some elements in copy might be just useless
 - In the copy the next potential problem might be that some part of my offer is bad, maybe I didn't have the strongest key selling propositions

- The big thing might be the length of the copy, it has long paragraphs, and the sections are long so people are off when they start to reading it.
- Ads
 - Targetting - I think that the problem with ads might be that I am not targetting right traffic, that I didn't get was called conversions that ads are showing up to the people that convert before
 - Headlines - The headlines are might be lame and I should use from hook library headlines that have key words and other stuff
 - Logo - I might bad look on the competitors, because I couldn't set up logo in ads, so I don't have logo
 - On the ads for some reason I have similar keywords, so I am showing up where I shouldn't
- Budget

Winning Writing Process

1. Who am I talking to?

- a. Homeowners in and around Wrocław
- b. Middle-aged woman

Name: Angelina Nowak

Short Story:

Angelina Nowak is a 38-year-old business owner in a large city in Poland. She has always dreamed of an elegant fence that would enhance the charm of her modern home and reflect her attention to aesthetics and detail. Angelina is ambitious and meticulous about her surroundings. Unfortunately, her previous experiences with fencing companies have been far from ideal. Disappointed with the quality of materials and service, she is determined to find a company that meets her high expectations.

2. Where are they at now?

- a. They are got to the fence contractor website from searching on google
- b. market awareness: level 3
- c. market sophistication: 5
- d. desire: High 7/10
- e. belief: mid 4-5/10
- f. trust: low (they don't know this brand)

Current state

Angelina fears that investing in a new fence will be another waste of money if the quality isn't up to par.

She worries about dealing with unprofessional service and long completion times again.

Anger:

She is furious with previous suppliers and contractors for their lack of professionalism, low-quality materials, and unmet promises.

She is disappointed that these companies do not value individual customers and treat them with disdain.

Daily Frustrations:

She sees her fence deteriorating daily, which affects her mood and self-esteem.

She constantly has to remind contractors about corrections, which is time-consuming and stressful.

Shame:

She feels embarrassed in front of neighbors and friends because her fence looks worse than expected.

She is ashamed of having spent a lot of money on something that doesn't meet her expectations.

Feelings:

She feels powerless and frustrated that her problems are not being resolved.
She feels that her commitment to quality is not respected by companies.

Others' Opinions:

Others might think Angelina cannot make the right choices for suppliers and contractors.
Neighbors might see her fence as an example of bad investments.
Problem Description:

"My garden looks horrible because the fence is crooked and rusting. Every visit from friends reminds me of my poor decisions. I am disappointed by the lack of professionalism from companies that only promise but don't deliver quality."

Desirable Dream State

Dreams:

Dream State:

If she could magically change her life, she would have a beautiful, durable fence made from the highest quality materials.

She would feel proud of her home, knowing that every part of her property is perfectly refined.

Feeling in Dream State:

She would feel fulfilled and proud of an investment that brings her joy and satisfaction.
She would be admired by neighbors for her beautiful, modern fence.

Secret Desires:

She most desires her home to be an example of quality and elegance that she can boast about to friends and family.

How Others See Her:

In her dream state, neighbors and friends see Angelina as someone with an excellent sense of style and taste.

She is seen as a role model for home and property care.

People admire her home and fence, seeing her as someone who invests wisely and pays attention to every detail.

She is treated with respect and admiration for her commitment to quality and aesthetics, making her an authority on home and fencing matters.

Dream Description:

"If anything were possible, I would want a fence that not only looks beautiful but is also durable and maintenance-free. I dream of neighbors admiring my home, and I would be proud of every penny spent on this investment."
