

A few words about my situation with Miya Mewrilee - Since he hasn't been forthcoming with information and I'm gradually seeing more misinformation on the situation.

To start off, I want to make it clear this is only my experience, I am not speaking on behalf of anyone else, I will not be naming any other names, I haven't intentionally rounded up or sought out other people with issues with him, this is just what I found out naturally over the course of the past few weeks. Out of respect of our private lives I won't be going into too much detail, you don't need to agree with me, I just want to clear some of the confusion and put out my side of the story.

-

I met Miya when I was 17 years old, I am now 39. We bought a house and have lived together since 2015. The breakup for me was very out of the blue, we weren't without our troubles, we both had our faults, neither of us were perfect and I don't intend to sit here pretending I am. I knew a lack of intimacy on my part and me being unemployed did put a strain on things for Miya but from my point of view, he would just mention it as an off-hand remark once in a blue moon but he always reassured me that he still loved me, so on the whole I thought we were ok.

I knew Miya always struggled to show or voice his thoughts and feelings, over the years I genuinely tried to reassure him that it was ok for him to be vulnerable with me, that he needed to share his problems instead of keeping them bottled away, I always tried to be a safe space for him but he very rarely communicated with me, this unfortunately led to the breakdown of the relationship.

When he first told me he was breaking up with me, he just said that we had grown and changed too much as people, I asked if there was another person he was with, or interested in and he assured me there wasn't, nor was there any plan to find someone else at the time. I tried to speak to him a couple more times as I was devastated and as much as I was hurt, I wanted to see if we could salvage things, he was my entire world after all but sadly on the 3rd talk, it became abundantly clear that it was too far gone.

On the 3rd talk, he did open up more about the situation, I'm not gonna rewrite all the details but it basically amounted to me being too depressed and too unemployed for too long and not sexual enough and that he had been feeling this way for a couple years now. These were things I knew were points of contention in the relationship and I won't pretend to be innocent of my faults, but in my defence, he never seriously communicated to me that it was driving as much of a wedge between us as it evidently was, he just mentioned it occasionally, reassured me it was fine and we went about our days, I genuinely had no idea how badly it was eating away at him on the inside.

I know these things often end up as character assassinations on both parts so I want to say a few things about my faults first:

I was unemployed and depressed following 2 consecutive mental breakdowns I had at 2 different jobs, he knew this, I was always very open with him about my struggles, at the time I didn't know why I struggled so much with the things I did but I am now on the waiting list for ADHD assessment and highly suspecting I have autism as well which I plan to pursue professionally after dealing with the ADHD assessment but being Neurodiverse to some degree would largely explain why I struggled with things in the past so badly. Again, I communicated this to him so he was well aware, he knew I was on the waiting list for assessment and also for therapy. I know now from his point of view I didn't seem like I was doing enough but I really was trying my best.

With regard to intimacy, I know that's important in a relationship and for a long time we would frequently have sex, personally I wasn't ever super interested in sex but I did it to make him happy because I knew that "that's just what couples do". Later on in life, I began having pain and bleeding during penetration which got to a point where I couldn't force myself to keep doing it anymore as it was so internally painful for me. Since then, we stopped having penetrative sex. I did go to the Dr's about this and Miya was at the appointment with me so he KNOWS I tried seeking help for it, but sadly as women's health often is, I was unfortunately just fobbed off so we just remained in a sexless relationship at that point but it was not due to a lack of love on my part, I just didn't have a need for sex and when it became physically painful for me to do so, I reached a point where I stopped forcing myself to do something painful just for his benefit.

I'm not saying this to excuse my actions, just to explain them. I also eventually realised that I was asexual because I literally had no interest in sex at all and later on, again when I realised I might be Neurodivergent, this also made it clear to me that I think I just went along with sex as long as I did as a form of masking, just doing what people do to do the right thing and fit in.

After talking with him for the 3rd time, I knew I was in no place to change these faults of mine any time soon and I realised that the core issue was the fact that Miya never properly communicated with me and it was far too little too late now but I begged him, both for his own sake and that of potential future partners, I begged him to work on himself, find ways to open up, communicate, find better coping mechanisms, despite how hurt I personally felt, I still just wanted the best for him. In this chat, he reiterated to me that he hadn't cheated on me and there was no other person but later on in the same talk, he asked me "what would you do if you heard me fucking someone else?" which threw me for a loop because, why on earth would you even say that? It was upsetting to hear and I felt myself letting go of him once he said it, the insensitiveness of it was too much.

We decided we would still live together for the time being, I considered the split sad, but amicable. It was hard to process but I was doing my best, I did a life update stream to inform my community since Miya was often mentioned by me so I wanted people to know to avoid any awkward moments of people speaking like we were still together. After said stream, I checked my emails because I was eagerly awaiting a commission delivery and I had an email from someone who contacted me because my twitter DM's were closed, this person informed me that they had seen Miya's tweet about the breakup but she reached out because Miya had been sexting her, sending explicit images of himself and even suggesting they hook up the next time he was in London for business.

I will not be naming the individual and I was initially doubtful because he had always assured me he would never cheat on me, even when I voiced my insecurities to him about how he talked to other women vtubers and the fact we had SEVERAL mutual friends who had been cheated on in similar circumstances, so I didn't believe it could be true and I know chat logs can be faked, but the evidence included a picture clearly showing his penis with belongings that I recognised from our house in the frame. I'm not going to share the picture due to its explicit nature and the fact that I don't want to out the woman who notified me, but the proof was undeniably him and I spiraled.

I called up my mum and moved me and my cat out of my home that same night. I felt sick, I had been lied to for god knows how long, I instantly felt like I didn't even know the man I was living with anymore, fight or flight kicked in and I didn't confront him, I just fled, I was genuinely too scared to stay there, in that moment, I instantly felt like I didn't know what he was capable of anymore.

That night, Miya went around discord attempting to talk to several of the close friends I have who were also his friends, fishing for information/sympathy, telling them I was suddenly gone and saying how he "wasn't expecting me to be gone so soon", acting like he was the poor victim even though he was the sole person to initiate the breakup to begin with.

I did confide in my friends to let them know what happened, so him going around messaging everyone put them in a really awkward position where they had to pretend they didn't know why even though they actually did. One person hopped on a voice call with him and he spent ages pouring his heart out to her, telling her all sorts of things she had no business knowing, insisting he didn't know what happened and that he'd never cheat, ect.

Over the next couple days, I learned a lot about him, people let me know things he had been saying about me behind my back, he was complaining to a lot of people how hard it was for him that I didn't have sex with him, even though he would always tell me off and tell me not to talk about things that were even remotely personal. He was asking someone in a poly relationship how they made it work because he "tried hinting to Megu but she just shoots it down". The double standards were stacked higher than I thought possible.

As a result of Miya's sexting, cheating and lying coming to light, he not only hurt me, but also a lot of his close friends, community members and even other vtubers who looked up to him. We've all found out that he has said and done things he always swore he would never do. He told many of our mutual friends how he never had and never would cheat on me and now we're all collectively mourning the loss of a dear friend who we've now realised never even really existed. I've also since found out that he had also been gooning to another vtuber, buying her gifts, making deals to do things if he got to kiss her, offering how he'd let her live with him if I wasn't around and hurtful things like that.

I've had a lot of time since then to think about past behaviours, it's honestly been really hard to process everything, it still is. I no longer know where the lies started or the truth ended, I don't know if I ever knew the real Miya despite being with him for 22 years. In talking to my close friends, mum and even a therapist since this all happened, I've come to realise just how deep his lying and manipulative behaviours ran and even now, he's being deliberately vague and misleading about things, acting like he's the victim who needs to heal when this was literally all his own doing.

He made a discord announcement about the breakup and told everyone it was "the hardest decision we've had to make" but it was never "we", it was all him, I was happy with how things were, he wasn't a perfect partner but neither was I and I loved him despite my gripes with him. He made a tweet too which he has since deleted, but again he made it look like it was peaceful and amicable, it was not. When he knew that I found out, he came round to my mums house asking to speak to me. I didn't want to see him and my mum talked to him and got rid of him but he was crying and swearing that it was only 1 time, but we already knew that wasn't true. He made another tweet which was promptly deleted when people started saying he screwed up and needed help but the tweet basically said about how he sexted once and now it's ruined everything but it was written in a very self pitying kind of way and again, we know it's more than 1.

He hasn't once shown any sign of being truly sorry for his actions or lies towards me or his friends and he has shown no accountability whatsoever. He told us that he was going to take a year away from everything to sort his life out, yet he's been back multiple times since then to go on discord and twitter to post things, remove mod status from everyone, unfollowing friends on twitter and locking his account when his most recent pity post didn't get the reaction he wanted and things like that. He told one of his friends that he was getting help from Samaritans and they told him to cut contact with people he had relationships or flirting with, yet I know he contacted at least 1 person he was flirting with since then. He's blaming everything on Miya the vtuber, as if it wasn't him irl making every decision to do what he did with his vtuber persona.

Every new bit of information has been a further stab to the gut for me and the friends he lied to. We're all hurting in our own ways, we've all lost someone we genuinely loved, only to find out we never even knew them at all and it's really hard to work through but we're all doing our best in our own ways.

I made this doc for information purposes since Miya has been super vague and misleading with what little information he has provided. I keep seeing tweets and comments from people, wondering where he's gone, questioning what happened or relaying his incorrect narrative and it's hard for me to keep seeing it, I've had an influx of followers on my socials and discord and it's been overwhelming because I don't know if people are there for genuine reasons or just for the tea. It's been exhausting to see and to deal with so I just wanted to write this in the hope of providing some clarity.

I don't want anyone to witch hunt him, you don't need to fight him on my behalf or anything like that, I just want people to know what really happened. There is a lot of missing details here but as I said at the beginning I don't want to list out everything, I don't generally think personal issues like this should be made public but he's said enough to get people talking and questioning so I felt like I had to say something.

If you made it this far, thank you for reading. If you've been hurt by his behaviour, I'm so sorry you had to go through this too.