

I somehow accidentally created a charming comedy crossover of Corner Gas and That '70s Show...enjoy this beautiful disaster of a masterpiece in artistic liberty.

STONKS & GAS

Two morons. One market crash. Zero understanding.

The Pitch

When a pair of slackers — one from Point Place, Wisconsin and the other from Dog River, Saskatchewan — accidentally destabilize the North American economy through a meme-stock Reddit group, the U.S. Treasury and the RCMP are forced into the dumbest joint investigation in financial history.

It's The Big Short meets Corner Gas meets That '70s Show — a cross-border buddy comedy of economic idiocy.

The Idiots

Ashton Kutcher as Michael Kelso – A former pretty-boy trying to reinvent himself as a “financial influencer.” Thinks “shorting a stock” means wearing cargo shorts. Fred Ewanuick as Hank Yarbo – Still jobless, still proud, now convinced he’s “the Canadian Wolf of Wall Street.” His office is the gas-station parking lot.

They meet on Reddit’s r/GetRichEh and, through a series of typos and misunderstandings, launch a short squeeze on a worthless Canadian lithium company.

Suddenly they’re the faces of a populist uprising they don’t understand.

Kelso: “We’re market disruptors, Hank!”

Hank: “Yeah, but, like... do we have to pay taxes on that?”

The Enabler

David Spade as Rick ‘Crypto Rick’ Duntley – A washed-up YouTube crypto “expert” hired by both governments because he’s the only guy who can speak fluent Reddit.

He lives in sunglasses and buzzwords: “synergy,” “blockchain,” “tokenomics.”

Spade: "You can't arrest innovation, man—unless it's trending."
Kurtwood: "I can sure as hell try, Duntley."

He teaches Kelso and Hank just enough tech-bro nonsense to blow up two markets and half of North America's bandwidth.

The Pursuers

Kurtwood Smith as Agent Red Forman – A grizzled U.S. Treasury bulldog who's one "dumbass" away from retirement.
Eric Peterson as Oscar Leroy – A retired Mountie dragged back into duty to provide "Canadian insight."

They hate each other instantly but are united in mutual exasperation.

Red: "You're telling me two gas-station morons broke the NASDAQ?"
Oscar: "Well, you let Elon Musk tweet, didn't ya?"

The Wild Card

Lorne Cardinal as Davis Quinton – Dog River's finest and the RCMP's "cyber expert," whose credentials come from an unfinished online course titled Crypto for Cops.

Davis: "I didn't pass, but they gave me a participation badge!"

He somehow becomes the bridge between the U.S. task force and the Dog River locals — livestreaming the sting, hashtagging everything, and unintentionally exposing the entire operation while thinking he's doing community outreach.

He ultimately solves the case by accident while explaining how he invested the RCMP pension fund in Dogecoin.

Davis: "Turns out we've been chasing DOG Energy Ltd., not DOGE Energy Ltd.
So technically... nobody broke any laws?"
Red: stares in aneurysm

The Secret Mastermind

Nancy Robertson as Wanda Dollard – Corner Gas’s quick-witted cashier turned market oracle.

She started the whole fiasco as a prank to amuse herself, shorted the boys’ company, and retired before lunch.

Wanda: “I made ten grand betting on stupidity. It’s the most reliable commodity on earth.”

She spends the finale sipping coffee at the till while everyone else gets arrested on live TV.

The Climax

The investigation converges on Dog River.

Kelso and Hank barricade themselves inside Corner Gas.

Davis livestreams it to TikTok.

Crypto Rick tries to sell NFTs of the arrest.

Oscar argues jurisdiction.

Red Forman threatens to ground the entire country.

Red: “This is why I hate the internet.”

Cue BTO’s “Takin’ Care of Business.”

Wanda cashes out.

Dog River goes viral.

The markets crash.

End Credits

> Ashton Kutcher ... Fred Ewanuick ... David Spade ... Kurtwood Smith ... Eric Peterson ... Lorne Cardinal ... Nancy Robertson

STONKS & GAS: DUMBASS DIPLOMATIC IMMUNITY

Coming soon to Crave, TBS, and the RCMP Training Video Archive.