

For Natacha: You wrote about your weaknesses. Fatal mistake. You want my vote? You need to earn it. You need to crush itxLuca now and devastate his whole life. Destroy him. Why are you the ALPHA and he the BETA. Tell me why you deserve the victory and he deserves NOTHING!

itxLuca: It appears that you had some very methodical plays. I can jive with that. You're like a James Bond except for a silly digital fuckhouse game where you can't actually bone baddies. That's okay though, you're still a star. If you want my vote you need to PROVE that your skills extend beyond just this game. I want to see you showcase some ninja and spy skills. A video of you throwing ninja stars maybe, or stealing an 82 inch TV from Walmart. Who knows! Either way, if you want my vote you'd better be ready to REALLY prove you got the moxie that deserves it.

itxLuca's Answer: Being a law-abiding citizen, this is the best I could do given two-three days. It does show though that I go hard in any game I play, not just Vivor/BB. Hope you enjoy <3 I realized I say "oh my god" a lot when I play fortnite lmao

<https://youtu.be/nSeMt5RN0IE>

Also I've been playing Pokemon Go since release, so almost two years, and am almost level 39, here's some proof:

<https://imgur.com/yBGnyeF>

Natacha's Answer:

I honestly do not see how stating my weaknesses is a fatal mistake, it just shows that I am not delusional enough to think I am perfect. I am aware of what I can do to improve my gameplay and being able to recognize this makes me capable of improving. I basically came into this game without any strategy, and now I'm here in the finals. Only God knows where I would have ended up if I had one. Unlike sneaky Luka, who played safe the whole game and created a bunch of fake alliances to remain on everyone's good side, I picked the right people to team up with and was not afraid to do what I felt was right even if it meant getting on people's bad side.