

What kind of disciplinary action will they face?

The World Baseball Classic (WBC) in March was a tournament that had little left in Korean baseball. Since pre-training in Arizona before the tournament, abnormal weather and pitcher conditions have been a concern. In the end, he failed to advance to the second round of the finals with the third place in the group (2 wins and 2 losses) and was criticized. In the Korea-Japan match, he was frustrated by the wide gap.

After returning, their teams also shared the aftereffects. LG's Ko Woo-suk, Doosan's Kwak Bin, KIA's Na Sung-beom, KT's Park Byung-ho, Joo Kwon (China), So Hyung-joon, and LG's Oh Ji-hwan were struggling or struggling with large and small injuries. Kiwoom Lee Jung-hoo and Lotte Park Se-woong were worried about their unusual performance in April. Many clubs had a hard time managing the season, feeling the absence of the main players.

There is another issue here. On the 30th of last month, it was known through media reports that pitchers of the national team drank until dawn at a bar during the WBC tournament. Even if it was an individual choice, the fact that the national team players came and went to entertainment bars during the competition did not meet public expectations and as a result, KBO hurriedly decided to discuss holding a disciplinary committee with a confirmation of facts and a report. On the 1st of this month, SSG Kim Kwang-hyun, NC Lee Yong-chan, and Doosan Jung Chul-won, who were mentioned as the players, each made a public apology. The three players judged that it was right to bow their heads in consideration of public sentiment even though the case was still under way. All three players said they are sorry for disappointing baseball fans and will face any disciplinary action.

What kind of disciplinary action will they face. According to Article 13 of the KBO's National Team Operation Regulations, disciplinary committee will be held for "those who caused social controversy." 3. A. There is a possibility that it may fall under the "person who intentionally defamed the national team."

It may end with a severe warning or a sanction, but there is also a possibility of disqualification of the national team and suspension of participation in the regular season. In fact, according to Article 13 disciplinary action 5, if the president refuses to participate in the tournament for reasons not recognized, he can be suspended from 30 games in the KBO regular season from the date of the rejection. Since he is a player in the KBO, he has to follow the rules. The same goes for his team.

If the issue is judged to be severe and disciplinary action is imposed, it will cause personal damage to the player who cannot play, as well as to the teams that cannot use the player in necessary situations. In particular, as he is a player who is transferred to the national team, the damage could increase because he is a key pitcher for each team.

Right now, Kim Kwang-hyun was excluded from the first-tier entry for self-reflection on the 1st. Depending on public opinion, Lee Yong-chan and Jung Chul-won may not be able to take the mound normally for the time being. If the suspension comes out, the disciplinary action will not be applied retroactively, so their gap may be prolonged.

Park Se-woong recently said, "After the WBC, I may be tired without realizing it. The members said, "It's hard after the competition." "It's hard as if it's over a season," he said, "I thought it would be true, but the pressure and fatigue of the international competition were different from just the game," revealing the aftereffects of the WBC. However, fatigue is now seen as a "grave" compared to other players. More than two months after the end of the tournament, the "WBC aftermath" is still underway here and there.
