

Bob Wendel is a 14 year-old boy from Chicago Illinois. He is a happy and careless kid. He is also easily recognized. He has a ginger hair and an eye-catching bowlcut. He is noticeably skinny and he has just gotten braces too. He also has big glasses and without them he literally can't see anything. Puberty has hit him and he has gotten some large pimples on his forehead. Bob is very outgoing and really tries to fit in with everyone. He is a clever kid and good at school. That may be in his genes since his mom is a teacher in college and his dad is a lawyer. Unfortunately for Bobby, he is not exactly the coolest kid in school. Especially the school's football team isn't a fan of him. The leader of the team, Brad Morgan is behind all of it.

Brad is a year older than Bob. He is also one of the popular kids in school. Like said he is the leader of the football team. He gives a cocky and mean picture of himself and seems to be full of himself. That is only in school though. At home he has his own difficulties. His mom passed away when he was 10 and his dad has a problem with alcohol. At school Brad gets to be the tough guy. He likes to pick on the kids that have no word against him. Especially our Bobby.

Brad and his buddies had picked on Bob since he started middle school. Constant insults and laughing at his looks. One day our little Bob was in gym class. Naturally there is separate locker rooms for boys and girls. These locker rooms are joined with a single door that is always closed but never locked for safety reasons.

Obviously everyone was all sweaty after the gym class ended. There for all the kids hopped to the showers to clean up. Bob took off his glasses and clothes and went to wash himself. Brad and his pals wanted to be funny and took Bob's glasses. When poor Bob came off the shower he tried to reach for his glasses. Soon he realized that the glasses weren't there. Brad was standing next to the door to girls' locker room yelling "Did you lose something, kiddo?" Bob as blind as a boy can be walked towards the voice trying to get his glasses back. Without him even noticing Brad had took his phone out and opened the door. Naked Bob, without a clue walked to the other locker room while Brad filmed him. Bob finally realized his mistake when all the girls started screaming hysterically.

Video spread everywhere. And when I say everywhere, I mean EVERYWHERE. It was on facebook, twitter and Instagram. Everyone in the school had seen it and the next two days all the middle schoolers were laughing at Bob and calling him a creep. He was labeled as a nasty pervert now who likes to creep on girls. On the opposite they were all praising Brad for taking a video that excellent. And those who knew it was a prank just thought Brad was a pure genius.

Eventually Bob's school's head teacher saw the video. He had heard the insults on the hallway and the rumours of sexual harassment inside his school. He watched the video and was shocked. It wasn't funny to him. It wasn't making him laugh like it made all those kids laugh. This was serious. One day he asked Bob to come to his office and no questions asked told him: "Bob, I'm sorry but I have no choice but to expel you."
