

Write your paragraph here:

While some parents know that they should look after their child, others do not. Another work of literature that deals with the idea of caring for other people is the story "Baby on the Beach" by Alix Kates. In this story, a woman, alerted by cries, finds a lonely baby on the beach without his parents, to find out that they purposely left him there as an incentive to walk with his family. While there is logic in this,