

Jihadism

14 dead, 100 wounded and adding. The attack on Las Ramblas in Barcelona has caught us totally unprepared. The mode of mass outrage has once again been the method chosen by the Jihadists. The modality of running to hide later as cowards are turning into a cliché. No longer immolated by Allah, are they losing their faith? You know. In any case, I am ashamed to think that for some time I came to believe that Spain was safe from Islamic terrorism. I naively believed that this was a kind of give and take. That if you acted against the jihadists in the Middle East, they would return the grievance to you in your own house. And given that our military presence in those homes is scarce and only of a technical nature, I saw no reason for them to act in Spain. But the savagery in Barcelona shows how enormously wrong it was. Now I see that terrorism is a scourge that does not need justification to recreate death scenarios. They are murderers, they need to kill. The where and the when long does not care.