READING Read the passage and answer the questions that follow.

	Fiona and the Seals
I	It all started back in 1976, when a young woman named Fiona Middleton sat on a rock by the sea, playing her violin. She suddenly heard noises, and to her surprise, a seal appeared quite close to her. As she continued playing, several seals joined the first, all listening to her music. Ever since that first "concert" so many years ago, Fiona, a resident of the Hebridean Isles in Scotland, has continued to go to the sea and play. Sometimes 40 seals at a time come to listen.
II	Fiona's relationship with the animals grew even deeper in 1988, when a virus put the seals in danger. In some areas of Scotland, home to the majority of Europe's grey seals, more than 50 per cent of the Scottish seal population died. Fiona began caring for sick and hurt seals and abandoned pups, taking them home and releasing them to the sea when they were well.
III	At that time she also organised a campaign, raising money and selling recordings of her music. She attracted the support of organisations such as Save Our Seals and Greenpeace. With their help a new vaccine for the virus was developed and sick seals were successfully treated with antibiotics.
IV	Today, Fiona's actions focus on another problem facing the seals in her area. Because seals eat fish, fishermen are legally allowed to shoot them. Fiona is working to change this law so that the seals are better protected.
V	Fiona, her husband and her three daughters still share their home with sick and injured seals as well as abandoned pups. She has published a book on her work with the seals and continues to campaign and sell her music. Hopefully, these fascinating creatures will soon receive better government protection and be able to live peaceful lives in the sea.
