

Here's a formal draft you can use as a petition to Congress addressing the need for a National Trust for Health Care:

Petition to the United States Congress for the Establishment of a National Health Care Trust

To the Honorable Members of the United States Congress:

We, the undersigned citizens of the United States, respectfully petition Congress to create a National Health Care Trust—an independent, publicly accountable body dedicated to ensuring stable, equitable, and transparent funding for health care in our nation.

Our current health care system, while advanced in medical capability, faces deep and persistent deficiencies:

1. Unequal Access: Millions of Americans remain uninsured or underinsured, obstructed by high costs, limited coverage, and inconsistent access to care across states.
2. Financial Instability: Health care costs continue to rise faster than wages or inflation, leaving families and small businesses financially strained and jeopardizing our nation's economic health.
3. Administrative Waste: A complex network of private insurers and billing systems consumes vast resources that could otherwise fund patient care and innovation.
4. Public Health Vulnerabilities: The lack of a unified national funding mechanism undermines our ability to respond effectively to public health crises, such as pandemics or natural disasters.
5. Mental and Preventive Health Neglect: Preventive care and mental health services remain underfunded, leading to an overburdened emergency care infrastructure and poorer long-term outcomes.

A National Health Care Trust would serve as a secure, dedicated foundation for funding health services, research, and preventive care—operating transparently and independently from short-term political pressures. Such a trust would stabilize the financing of our health system, promote efficiency, reduce administrative waste, and ensure that every person in America can access necessary care without fear of financial ruin.

We urge Congress to convene hearings, commission studies, and take legislative action to establish and fund the National Health Care Trust as a step toward a stronger, fairer, and more sustainable health system for all Americans.

Respectfully submitted,
