

THE BREADSTICK MULTI-MEDIA MAGAZINE

Submission Guidelines

About Us: The Breadstick is a multi-media magazine created from the wild, wacky, funky, and fresh minds of MiddKids with pieces that evoke anything from grieving a stolen bike to the mystery of losing a loved one. We encourage all creators to submit their work to be featured on our website.

We also encourage creators to submit work for our semesterly publication, The Crumb, where we challenge you to create greatness within the confines of a 4" by 6" postcard! Every semester we will celebrate the talents of Middlebury College students with an exhibition.

Our Mission: We aim to cultivate a fun space where MiddKids can share their creative work with other students, from polished artworks and writings to half-baked doodles and story snippets.

General Submission Guidelines:

Thank you for submitting to the Midd Breadstick!

For general submissions to be published online, we accept art and writing. Writing may include short stories (any genre), poetry, and creative nonfiction. Each submission must be <1500 words per story. Art may include photographs, single comic strips, photography, paintings, drawings, and digital art. You may submit as many pieces of art and writing as you want. Please include the titles of your piece.

We publish submissions on our website on a rolling basis.

Please provide your full name, graduating year, and email along with your submissions. In addition, if you would like to have your work published anonymously, please indicate that along with the previous information. If you are submitting multiple pieces at once, please submit in one document with page breaks to indicate separation.

Cereal (Serial) Publications: For serial publications (eg. continuous comics, stories >1500 words or broken up into chapters), you must provide 4 weeks worth of content up front, and your idea must be approved by Breadstick editors before your work will be published.

*Keeping in mind our mission of creating an outlet for creators to share their work, as editors of The Breadstick, we reserve the right to not publish media that we believe will cause harm in the community.
