Internship and Job Applications

Deadlines: Application deadlines for both jobs and internships in finance occur over a year in advance of the actual start of the position. For example, a recruitment event that occurs in February 2023 would open the application process for full-time and summer 2024 positions. First- and second-year students who participate in leadership conferences, summits, and additional winter or spring events, are usually invited to interview and will accept or decline offers for summer 2024 at the end of the event occurring in winter or spring. Smaller firms may post positions and hire throughout the year.

Internship requirements

First- and second-year internship applicants do not need to have experience in finance or have taken finance courses to apply. Employers hire applicants with the skill sets to be successful. Employers in finance look for candidates with skills in leadership, critical thinking, analytics, research, communication, and problem-solving skills. As an intern, you can learn the financial or technical skills needed through free online resources (see Training Videos and Courses section).

Job Requirements

Finance job postings are generic descriptions that are sent by the organization to multiple universities and job boards. You do not need to major in finance or in economics to apply for full-time positions. Employers are not looking for only one approach to solving problems or managing new investments and risks. Bring the perspective of a social scientist, life/physical scientist, humanist, or engineer to analyze situations and solve problems. For full-time positions, you can learn the financial skills needed by taking a selection of business-related courses on campus (ExploreCourses) and/or through free online courses (see Training Videos and Courses section).
