

The busy Buns normally have time to get together at least once a month. Unfortunately it has been a lot busier than they had expected for some time now. Though after two months they finally got together after it seemed like they could afford to miss a day of business and decided to meet up at a nicer restaurant so they had time to sit and relax outside of a chaotic building one of them called their own.

Angora and Hops were the first to be there, followed by Shibani and Dan then following that it would have been Oleander and Mercy. Each pair arrived all about the same time and not too long after one another.

Angora was the one who ended up greeting them all as they arrived after each other and directed them inside of the nice restaurant, it was her idea and they had all gone with it. Each their own reason to accept it so easily.

As they were all led inside by the host of the establishment and then to a table, they were all chatting away about nonsense until they each sat down. Angora hummed while propping her head in her hand while glancing over everyone sitting at the table, all the while each of them were settling into their seats before looking at the woman staring each of them down.

“So how are things everyone? It’s been some time since we last got together like this.” Said the Casino owner said while she had ended up leaning back into her seat with her arms folded over her chest while Hops eagerly ordered a drink when the waitress came into the room to take their orders. Each Bun that ordered spoke up once they were finished doing so.

Oleander was the first one to speak up with a smile. “Everything’s been wonderful at the church, going smoothly! I have seen our numbers of followers coming in and returning recently, i’m not sure what changed but it has definitely been for the better! Isn’t that right Mercy?”

The Greed bun looked over once their order was taken and they nodded in agreement. “Yes, I’ve seen a lot of collections coming in too. We aren’t completely full when it comes to infants but I guess that’s a good thing?” The smaller bun tilted their head curiously while glancing at the head priest for confirmation. Oleander nodded his head and leaned forward a little bit to fold his arms on the table. “Bottom line is the Church has been moving forward steadily, though everything we do has picked up and got busier.”

Dan was the next to speak up, having ordered a bit ago and at the moment didn’t have a good time to jump into the conversation just yet. And once Angora looked at him he finally spoke up. “The Dango shop has been going well too, business has picked up a lot.” He shrugged while glancing over to Shibani who leaned against the table with his head on his arms. Only raising a brow when he noticed Dan looking at him.

“And he hasn’t been able to laze about as much when he’s in the shop, so that’s another good thing.” He said with a small huff under his breath but he did quickly turn his attention away from Shibani when the smaller bun sat up with a slight stretch. The sloth Bun let out a little groan when he finally relaxed. “It’s been so horrible, I was able to sleep a lot now, it’s just so noisy....”

Dan rolled his eyes and turned to the white haired bun again. "It never bothered you before." Shaking his head he looked forward at Angora and motioned at her. "How about you two? I'm going to assume nothing but good anyway." Angora nodded her head and Hops perked up and smiled. "Yeah, it's been fun! Got busier and I'm seeing more people with new and familiar faces!" Hops said gleefully.

Angora had moved a hand to pet Hops hair in a subtle way to quiet her down before speaking up herself. "Things have been going up so far, nothing showing I should be worried about my finances at all. The casino has been doing well enough that I could shut down my other businesses if I wanted to and still be fine!" Angora was grinning so brightly at the thought while continuing to pet Hops head to keep the bun calmed down while they had their food brought to the table as well as any drinks they had ordered.

There was two waiters who delivered everything they had ordered, Delicious plates of steaks, salads, some soups and desert to come right after their preferred drinks set down next to their plates as well before the waiters left the table and the successful Succubuns began to speak eagerly about their businesses while eating. How much revenue has gone up or just how busy it has gotten in general.

Dan spoke up again after too long. "I have been working on new flavors of Dango lately and I want you all to come by to try them out." He said, now halfway done with his food by that point and his drink in the same state, looking around the table to get any answers from the other Buns there. Angora nodded her head in agreement to coming down and verbalized it after she swallowed the mouthful of food. "Of course, I'll be more than happy to come by. I'm sure Hops would be happy to join in too."

Said Bun quickly swallowed her drink down and nodded her head eagerly. "I would love to!" Oleander hummed before speaking up himself. "I'm sure I can come by soon too. Just let me know the day so we can all be there. It has been far to long since we've been together like this so I'd like to take any chance of doing so again soon." He said with a small grin while taking a drink.

Mercy smiled at Dan and nodded their head. "Yeah just let us know when. I'm sure I can find another nun to take over my duties again for an evening." After speaking up Mercy took a bite off their plate while glancing at the silverware closely for a moment before they were nudged by the Lust Bun next to them.

Shinabi shrugged his shoulders and gave a tired smile. "You know i'll be there." was his only response to the invention Dan had given out. Shinabi returned to nibbling at his food when Dan spoke up again. "I'm still working on some so give me a couple of weeks, that doesn't mean we don't have to meet up again sooner." Was his easy response while also returning to his food and drink all the while Angora had to think it over for a moment.

She had seen how Oleander and Mercy were looking as well and it was something they were considering too. "What day specifically and we can all meet up in the afternoon at Dan's shop. I was thinking perhaps we can come by in the middle of the week. I'm sure it would lighten up most of our loads if we were to leave then right?" She asked looking at her friends who all seemed to agree with what she had just said.

Angora smiled while putting her fork down to sit up straight so the waiters can come by and collect their plates and glasses so they could bring in the deserts not to long after their plates were taken away, needless to say the waiters were quick enough that they couldn't continue their conversation for a few minutes but once the food was placed again and they were all eating slowly to keep talking Angora spoke up again soon after.

"I assume it's a Wednesday then? That is the best I can offer for myself and Hops. What about you two, Oleander, Mercy?" She said with a hum while taking another bite of the desert she had ordered. Oleander thought the answer over quickly before nodding his head as he finished up his bite of food that was left. "That works out for both of us just fine. Would it be two or three weeks from this Wednesday?" Dan thought about it for a moment while he chewed his food, nodding his head when he finally decided on the day.

"Three weeks, It will make sure I have things settled and the new flavors are where I want them to be." Angora smiled and nodded while they all finished their dinner. She stood up and gathered her things when they all went to do so. Chatting on their way out after paying their bills, no one wanted Angora to pay for them after all. They finally filed outside and stood at the entrance to give their goodbyes.

"So by my place in three weeks then?" Dan asked to make sure everyone knew what was going on.

"It seems that way, I'll see you all then or sooner. If I had a say, I would say let's get together sooner." Angora said while waving them all good bye and everyone headed off in their own directions until they were to meet up again soon.