

Forgotten...

Her head feels tight on my chest. She has been hugging me tightly for the past who knows how long. I know she feels safe in my arms. My heart has been thumping hard, so I know she's been listening to it, feeling life in me. My chin rests on her head, but I make sure that I don't hurt her by putting all of my head's weight on it. I love her with all my heart. She has been with me since childhood. She knows me inside out, and I know her too. The love we have for each other is unexplainable. It's like our souls have been intertwined. We have stuck with each other through thick and thin. Finally, today we said our vows and she is my wife and I her husband. We are gonna live for each other.

This town is horrifying to live in. People keep disappearing at night and come back without any memory. Most of them don't survive for long without memory in this wretched town. No one alive knows the history of the city and the reason why people keep disappearing and coming back with no memory.

We promised that on the day of our marriage, we would leave this wretched town forever and never come back. Now, we are in the back of the wagon. She is sleeping, hugging me tightly. This is the night we disappear from this town and start a new life literally anywhere else. It's almost midnight, I guess who is the unlucky one tonight who gets taken away. It's been a long day, and the travel in the wagon has been rough. I am feeling sleepy, my eyes feel heavy, my eyes...

I wake up. It's night. I don't know where I am. I am lying on the ground. I try to wake up. It's hard. I still try my best and wake up. Where am I? This place feels and seems unfamiliar.

Suddenly, I hear a girl's voice. She's calling out a name at me. Is it my name? Who is she? She runs towards me and tries to hug me. I try to push her away, but she won't let go of me. She keeps saying my name is Jack and her name is Rose, and that we've been married. I don't remember her or this place or who she is or when we got married. I don't understand what's going on. I can't find anyone else to help me console this woman. She is acting like a crazy person. She wants to hug me and kiss me, but I don't know who she is.

She keeps forcing me, I don't understand, so I push her away, but she still doesn't stop forcing herself on me. Finally, I snapped, gave her a hard push, and she fell hard on the ground. She must have hit something, as I heard a hard cracking sound. I went to check on her because I really didn't mean to hurt her. I just wanted her to stop forcing herself on me like a crazy person. I go near her and I realise she is bleeding from the head and she is not moving much. I didn't mean to hurt her, so I tried to help her, but I didn't know what to do.. She holds my hand and keeps repeating "Jack Jack". I have to help her. I have to do something.

She finally says, "We always said FOREVER," and she lets go of her last breath.

I have to find Jack and inform him about her death. I am sure that this Jack is someone very important to her...