

Shrek's War

By Zuxar_

Chapter 1

Deception and Cruelty

Shrek lived with his amazing wife Fiona and their three children, Fergus, Farkle and Felicia. Everyday was a new adventure in parenthood. Shrek was finally happy. No more attempts to take the throne of Far Far Away. No more people trying to get Prince Charming and Fiona together. But most of all Shrek wasn't discriminated against and hunted because he was an ogre. Sure he did miss terrorizing a village or two, but he still had peace.

It was the dead of night, there was little wind and a slight rain. The moon was just a sliver in the dark black sky. One of the children started crying. Waking the rest needing parents. Shrek said, "I got this one." When he got up and helped his crying son, he heard a bush rustling, someone whispering, and twigs snapping. He immediately thought, "Donkey, probably planning some sort of surprise." The big ogre let out a long sigh. All noises vanished. He decided to go back to bed and deal with Donkey in the morning. An hour later a loud crash awoke the two sleepy parents. In just a split second Shrek was up and knocking everyone around with his gigantic fists. They fled, and the two ogres became very concerned about their little ones. They both raced into their rooms. Just to see that their babies were taken.

Shrek ran to one of the unconscious heathens and tried to find some sort of identification. They came from Farnsworth.

Shrek became enraged and mad. He roared the loudest roar to be heard. It spread fear into all. Farnsworth poked a sleeping bear and let out an unholy rage.

Gathering an Army

Chapter 2

Shrek now thinking in an irrational way, sent a messenger to Far Far Away saying "The Devilish creatures of Farnsworth have taken my little triplets. I'm requesting the army of Far Far Away. This is a dire situation. Remember that I saved you from a life of being a peasant, I saved your life too. You better help me save my children." The words were scrawled and written quickly (I couldn't remember the prince from the third movie). The demand was denied. So Shrek had to use other methods.

Shrek went to a neighboring town, they were fans of Shrek. But most people were. Some gladly volunteered to help him in his cause, but most said no. The great beast went from town to town, and only to get two or three men. Eventually he got so far that he began to cross into an area untouched by anyone in the Grasslands and forests surrounding Far Far Away. That was where he began to realise that people worshiped him like a god (and they still do). Many people Joined his force, while others that did worship him gave shelter to the men and food and gold. Weapons too, as well as armour. He would Destroy Farnsworth, kill most of them and enslave the rest. That was his plan. When he was going door to door he came across a peculiar man. He had a sense of power around him. He seemed not to be trifled with. Shrek ignored this feeling and asked if he would volunteer in his conquest. The man disapproved of it and judged Shrek. He then tried to kill the old man, and in a flash the man was gone. Shrek was bleeding, five arrows in his side. He heard the man saying, "What happened to you, you were never like this. You helped people and you were kind. But I guess people change and there was no good in you." These words made the gigantic creature think about what he was doing, but he simply passed it from his mind. He was now even angrier from the offensive words. Said by a peasant old man, he had no right to say that to an heir to the throne of Far Far Away. Now with an army of thousands they marched towards Farnsworth.

Planning for War

Chapter 3

Shrek was a being that was alive before everything on earth. Shrek wasn't physically alive back then. He had no thoughts, no awareness of the fact that he was there. But when the prophecy was fulfilled, when someone said "Donkey get out of my swamp!" Shrek was awakened, Shrek was born into a physical world, where he could think. Remember Shrek is there and Shrek will always be there. The prophecy will be complete once again. But when that happens the world will be born anew. Peace will be everywhere, you could pluck it off an apple tree. It will be an apple of peace, an apple of Shrek.

Shrek was preparing for a ruthless war. There was no need to get ready however, because with the size of his army he would destroy the puny town in a second. After a few hours of prepping. Shrek heard a strange whirring and saw a flash of light in the room. "Who are you," Shrek called. The strange person in the beam of light suddenly appeared. He was young but he looked smart and strong. He answered Shrek's question, "It doesn't matter who I am, but what I can give you." During a moment of silent confusion Shrek finally said something. "What can you give me." "I can give you glorious things, things that would only be found thousands of years later. Look at this, when I pull the trigger that chair will duplicate." Shrek was dumbfounded, "You are simply using magic, you don't impress me with your sorcery." "Well then you don't want this, because if you take it I'll give you so much more. Things that would burn down a kingdom in a matter of seconds. Things of mass destruction." Shrek nodded his head indicating he wants these powers. He then gave Shrek a duplicator gun and showed him how to use it the same with other guns. Then he showed him the start of weapons of destruction. Finally getting to the modern ones that Shrek would use. The man taught Shrek, and then Shrek teach his men these ways of mass power.

The Beginning of War

Chapter 4

Shrek had all his men go into Farnsworth and take his children back, the peasants and those that can't defend themselves. He brought them faraway to a mountain overlooking Farnsworth. Everyone then watched as Nuclear weaponry roared through the skys. Napalms, Hydro bombs, Atomic bombs and so much more. He watched as the place he hated so much was buried in rubble and explosives. He had made a powerful enemy now. A missile blasted through the sky and hit the mountain base creating a rock slide. As well as making everything shake violently. All of them immediately fled from the mountain. That man visited them too.

Shrek ordered some of his men to go on a patrol around Farnsworth. He then ordered some more to go into Farnsworth and look around; they had radiation gear on so they were safe. The half of the men returned and said they found a secret base. The patrol did not return. The great big creature sent a small attack force to the hidden base. Gunshots, screams, yells and explosives could be heard for kilometres. A patrol said "That it was a big battle all of ours are dead some of theirs survived." Shrek, now a bit frightened, decided to duplicate his men. It worked; they had all the knowledge and memories that the originals had. Shrek decided to go into full scale war. He was going to siege the safe place in Farnsworth.

The Siege

Chapter 5

Shreks army crashed down the mountain side with blazing pride and glory. With guns in their hands they ran to a great battle site. The battle was ferocious and bloody. The move to send countless tanks in first was a smart one on shreks behalf. The thundering vehicles quickly dispatched enemy troops, tanks, and defensives. But the hard part had only just begun.

Shrek was leading the men towards the giant underground bunker. When they were about to go in, the doors began to slowly close. Shrek and as many men that could fit in the little time they had raced to go in. The army now cut in half, charged in. Shrek had superior weapons and technology but the opponent still put up a fight. The army charged farther into the base making sure no one was on their side. No one could escape because Shrek had Farnsworth completely surrounded. The losses on both sides were immense, but the attackers still had an upperhand in the battle that took place. In the every now and then Shrek would duplicate some men and send them to their doom our victory. Meanwhile outside the people that could get in we're trying to open the doors on both sides. At the secret exit they finally got it opened everyone started to rush in through the great gate. That was when the Farnsworth army was completely demolished and left to bleed among the many corpses.

Back Home

Chapter 6

When Shrek went home with his babies Fiona wasn't there. She had left, probably during the attack on Farnsworth. Shrek was confused. He had all the power in the world now, he owned a great army and an empire. Shrek sitting in his chair was thinking about why she would have left. A soldier bursted in and said in an unrecognizable, "One of ur' border trol' was ambushed by Fur Fur Away!" Shrek, outraged, declared war on the great kingdom. His army started the seven-hundred mile journey to the great kingdom.

Lord Have Mercy on Far Far Away

Chapter 7

Far Far Away is where London is now, and if you dig deep in the ground, you will find disturbing things. Things like skeletons, chunks of metals and destroyed buildings. All of this was done by Shrek's ruthless army, but they were affected too.

Soldier after soldier marched towards a great kingdom. A kingdom about to be showered in explosive weaponry. A Humongous army gathered outside of Far Far Away. The men outside waited on the ogre's command to attack.

A crowned figure appeared on the top of the walls. His eyes searched for the green demon.

The End.