- The Fight for Inclusive Libraries!
    - Becky Calzada, Nancy Jo Lambert, Carolyn Foote, Tammy Turner
    - bit.ly/FReadomtcea22
    - Sound a counter-narrative and share benefits of diverse books for our students
    - 13,000 tweets flooded TXLege during the first round
    - Students right to access books freely
    - Project Lit
    - The landscape of books is changing bc our students are changing
    - Publishers are now responding to the call of needing diverse literature
    - 1 in 6 adults in Gen Z identify as LGBT
    - Also must include: BIPOC, Neurodivergent, LGHT families, disabilities
    - Instructional materials are used in the classroom and used with the curriculum
    - LIBRARY BOOKS are VOLUNTARY INQUIRY
        - Libraries are spaces of voluntary inquiry.
        - Not instructional resources
        - Key term in terms of being in the library
    - When having kids in the library, “you DO NOT have to check out a book from this library.”
    - TLA Webinar with LEGAL EXPERTS
    - What do we do now?
        - Be proactive & Be prepared
            - Build inclusive collections
                - As a collective purchasing power, librarians have a huge say in publishing
                - Continue building and buying diverse books
            - Have a collection development policy
                - How do they help us build inclusive collections?
                - Know where your policy is.
                - Locate and know your school board policy.
                - our policy is in our Google Drive
                - What does it look like?
                - Does your policy need revision? If so, what is the process? How do you initiate?

        - Revise your guidelines so that they reflect current inclusive collection development policies
        - Engage the right people in the process
    - Resources: (in the slide)
        - ALA related
        - Lots of toolkits
        - Even things you can say when reaching out to a parent
        - ALA Bill of Rights
            - Provides good mentor language
- Reconsideration policy
    - Does your policy need revision? If so, what is the process? How do you initiate?
    - Engage the right people
    - Resources:
        - ALA Reconsideration Policy Toolkit
        - Sample Reconsideration Forms
        - Sample Letter to Complainant
        - Reconsideration Committees
- Challenge preparation
    - Know your policies and be prepared to show them to people who need to see them in a stressful moment
    - Think about scenarios that you are likely to encounter and prepare for those.
    - Practice in the mirror or with someone with what you will say. Practice your responses. Practice controlling your emotions.
        - Don't start sentences with "you.."
    - Prepare those involved before a challenge with what will happen so that they are not surprised
    - When a parent reaches out with an email, you do not have to respond right away-general rule is 24 hours for a response.
    - Have auto-replies "I'm teaching…"
    - Put response in a doc first, not in a reply.
    - Resources:
        - Inquiry response support document
        - ALA OIF
        - Freadom website
- Policy vs Guidelines
    - School boards all have a board policy-
        - voted on and is part of laws passed within the school

- Guidelines: here are different review sources that support our policy
    - SLJ
    - YALSA
    - Kirkus
    - Booklist
    - DOES NOT INCLUDE: Amazon or CommonSense
    - This ensures a common understanding for librarians
    - Connects to district core values -> inclusiveness
- Challenge Effects
    - Train people in your building
        - “The librarian is teaching, please leave your contact info and she will get back to you.”
    - School librarian self-censorship
    - Effects on publishing
    - District and school board policy shifts and changes
    - Professional organization stances and shifts
        - Stay current
- Important Considerations
    - FAQ responses

    - State laws
    - SBOE
        - Know who your rep is
        - These people are Elected officials
    - TSLAC
    - Legal Battles
    - SCOTUS
        - With changes in SCOTUS, things could change
- Parental Bill of Rights-already in Texas Education Code
    - Not a new idea
- We need to be engaged and be vigilant

- THIS IS WHY VOTING IS IMPORTANT!
  - Registering high school seniors
  - Tx law says they have to be given the right to register to vote

- We need to be able to lean in and rely on our policy and not have to rely on individuals.
- Have to have consistency.
- Classroom libraries:
  - Books that teachers bring in on their own that are not tied to any curriculum
  - Not required reading
  - Great opportunity to partner with ELA department.
  - Important to have the conversation and coach teachers
    - Encourage them to look at reviews
- Donations to libraries: we will review it and make sure it supports our policies and if it doesn't ask them to come back and get it.

    - Ashley Jackson Ivey (@techcoachashley) & Jennifer Temesvary (@techietemesvary)
    - bit.ly/uaslides
    - UD is the design and composition of an environment that allows it to be accessed, understood, and used to the greatest extent possible
    - 1 in 8 people in the US have a disability
    - Design
        - Jamboard is not accessible
        - Screen readers cannot pick up background images
        - Google Slides: use layouts provided for accessibility
        - Textbox order matters
        - Build your slide layouts: edit theme
        - Powerpoint:
            - Has “check accessibility” and will run a report for you.
                - Click Review Tab > Accessibility checker
            - The reading pane will show you if text boxes will read out of order.
        - Colors:
            - Levels to coloring
            - A high color contract makes anything easier to read.

  - Video Editing:
    - "Since Camtasia is a paid software, I wanted to share with you a free website that allows you to accomplish many of the same things. Clipchamp.com is a web-based video editing software that allows you to upload various elements, and create a polished video, just like Camtasia. There aren't as many bells and whistles, but there is plenty to get you started. Should you want to pay for the extra elements, there is the option to add to the basic version as well. One additional plus is that, depending on your district's internet usage policies, students can use this website to create awesome projects as well."
