

But the closure of Ontario's largest resort appears to have raised concerns not only from both sides but also from local business representatives and Windsor residents in the conflict.

Last week, Unipolar 444, which represents about 2,300 Caesars Windsor employees, announced that the negotiating team had reached a tentative agreement with casino officials. A ratification vote was scheduled on Friday, but workers rejected the new agreement presented to them. This time, 59% of striking workers voted against the casino management's proposal. As a result, 53 percent of voters on their provisional agreement refused their consent, and they expressed their concern between them.

According to the workers, many of them are not given full-time job opportunities, and instead, they are forced to work part-time, even though they have been at Caesars Windsor for years. Some of the details of the new contract have been disclosed, and according to them, workers will receive an hourly wage increase of $2.25 over the next four years. Workers will also receive contract bonuses depending on whether they work full-time or part-time. So they're going to get a "$1" bonus, and a "$1" bonus. 슬롯사이트

Unipolar 444 CEO Dave Cashdi urged workers to accept the deal and appeared quite surprised after the vote. The union represents approximately 1,345 full-time and 567 part-time employees. Caesars Windsor did not comment on the negotiations and their failures on its website, but announced that the resort would not operate until the end of May. This also means that casinos and hotels have now postponed all strikes on social media.

Local Companies Worried About Caesars Windsor Shutdown

When the casino resort was closed, hotel guests were moved to a small hotel in the area. And while this may have increased traffic at these facilities, the strike at Caesars Windsor is expected to have a very negative impact on the local tourism industry in the long run. The resort includes a hotel part, a casino, and a large concert hall that hosts performances every weekend. For example, this week's postponed event may still change the schedule for BLINK's Big 2 concert, which is scheduled for the next time.

According to tourism officials, Caesars Windsor is not just a hotel or casino, but one of the region's main attractions. According to Tourism Windsor Essex Pelley Island (TWEPI) CEO, the 46-day shutdown will affect plans for thousands of tourists to visit the area, or it will leave an "economic footprint" in the area. Many tourists now admit that the negative impact on the TWEPI region's economy is less likely.

The strike is the longest in Caesars Windsor's history, with some already calling for state intervention. According to Windsor-Tekumse MPP Percy Hatfield, Labor Secretary Kevin Flynn should try to address the issue because the two sides are not reaching an agreement. Windsor Mayor Drew Dilkens previously said he was willing to support the negotiations in any way he could. Once again, Dilcons acknowledges that journalists have rejected a temporary agreement.
