

CSUSB Black Residential Scholars

The Black Residential Scholars (BRS) Living Learning Community is devoted to elevating the CSUSB experiences of Black students by providing residents with academic, social and cultural resources. First year and continuing students have their own unique residential learning community, but together strive to create opportunities for all residents to continue their development as future Black student leaders. In collaboration with CSUSB African American student leadership organizations, Black Faculty, Staff and Student Association, and the Pan-African Center, BRS aspires to be a community that supports CSUSB Black students by welcoming them to CSUSB and opening avenues for mentorship, self-discovery, and empowerment as future leaders.

Living Learning Communities, known as LLCs, are open to all students living on campus at California State University, San Bernardino. Students who participate in these residential communities have the opportunity to live with other students who share similar identities, fields of study, or interests. LLC residents are supported academically and socially through intentional programs, and interacting with University faculty and staff partners to create opportunities to integrate classroom learning and student success.

Students are able to select a LLC on the 2024-2025 housing application!

Benefits of Living in a LLC

- LLCs support the personal development and academic success of our residents.
- Each LLC is unique, offering students the chance to live with others who share similar interests and/or identities, as well as the opportunity to interact with faculty, staff, peers, and campus departments.
- Residents create a community that embraces progressive conversations around personal and identity development, professional life skills, and self-reflection.
