

Processor: A chip that sends out a certain output depending on what was imputed

Monitor: Screen that displays the computer's user interface and programs

Sound Card: Computer component that allows audio input and output

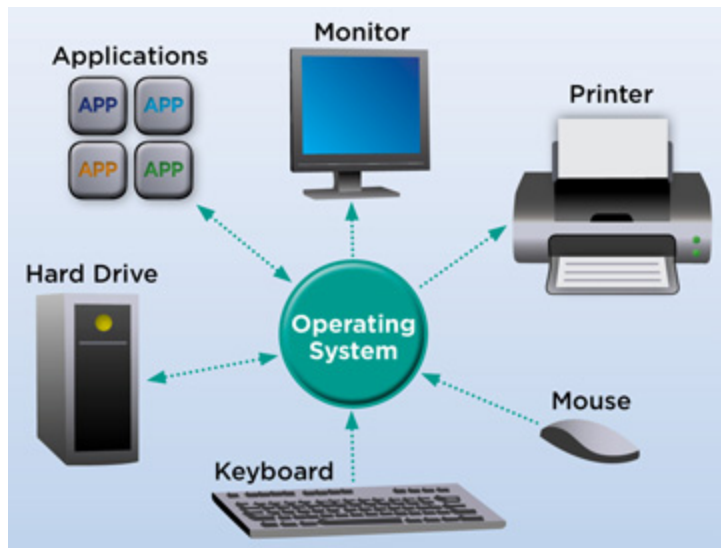

Keyboard: A board of keys controlled by the user to interact with the monitor

Memory: Component in computers that stores data in a digital format.

Operating System: Software that allows other programs to run

Hard Drive: Component that stores all of a computer's data.

Optical Drive: Lasers that can read data on discs and translate it into a format computers can read

Video Card: Unit that processes graphic information

Speakers: Output device that produces sounds

Mouse: Input device controlled by a person to interact with the monitor

Modem: Short for modulator; a device that connects two computers and can send data between them

