This is how to actually feel like working.

When you think about your work life.
Are you honestly proud of your progress?

Are you a person making a lot of money,
because you are able to provide a lot of value?

One that can outcompete anyone with their sheer ability to focus?

Or are you like most people, just showing up,
doing a minimal amount of work
and not trying to get a raise or earn more money?

A true failure.

Do you really want to live your whole life, barely making enough to pay the rent

Never being able to go on holiday with you children

Subject line: The secret to everlasting motivation is not what you think.

This is what made my boss convinced to give me a raise.

I finally landed a great paying job after graduating

Years of busting my ass in highschool and university, had finally paid off with the thousands I would make by delivering great copies for an advertising agency.

But then a meeting with my boss months into an amusing time at the company left me shattered.

All of my copy in the last weeks had been the worst in the history of the company

I was embarrassed.

A lack of focus and outside distractions had taken a toll on my work.

I had only a couple of days to show my boss why I should stay in the company.

I gave myself two options, either give up and go back to flipping burgers. OR give everything I had and hopefully stay in the company.

The choice was mine.

Thankfully I had just stumbled across the focus pill that made me able to have the focus I had been missing. I quickly started to deliver results greater than I ever had before.

My boss could not believe his eyes reading my copy.

I have the focus pill from Quilia to thank for that.
