

Maryland Car Accident Lawyer

On Maryland's busy roadways, accidents are bound to happen. If you were injured by another's negligent driving, recovering for your losses is crucial. However, trying to navigate insurance claims and jump through legal hoops can be challenging when you are also physically and emotionally recovering. Pursuing an injury claim effectively on your own is often difficult.

A Maryland car accident attorney provides critical support after a motor vehicle crash. Your lawyer can handle all aspects of your claim. They can gather relevant evidence and information, evaluate your damages, file an insurance claim on your behalf, and negotiate with the insurance company. Working with an experienced injury attorney can be beneficial, potentially maximizing your settlement.

Common Causes and Injuries After a Crash

Collisions are bound to happen; however, certain behaviors can increase the risk of these accidents happening. Negligent behaviors like distracted, drunk, or aggressive driving, and speeding are some of the most common causes of crashes on Maryland's roadways. These can also be aggravating factors, making motor vehicle accidents far more severe.

Car crashes can cause serious injury for the occupants of the involved vehicles. Drivers and passengers may find themselves physically, mentally, and emotionally injured.

Common injuries after a crash include:

- Traumatic Brain Injuries (TBI)
- Whiplash
- Spinal Cord Injuries
- Soft Tissue Injuries
- Fractures
- Lacerations
- Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD)
- Anxiety and Depression

Depending on the severity of these injuries, it can take weeks, months, or years to heal. In some cases, the effects can be life-altering. Recovering adequate compensation for these injuries, including medical costs, pain and suffering, lost wages, and medical expenses is essential.

How Do I Get Compensated?

Maryland is an “at-fault state.” This means that the driver who is responsible for the crash is liable for any damages. Proving fault is critical because Maryland is also one of the few states that has a strict contributory negligence doctrine. If a driver is even 1% to blame for the crash, they will be unable to recover compensation.

After an accident happens, injured parties will want to contact an experienced Maryland accident lawyer. An attorney can review what has occurred and make a claim with the insurance company. Drivers may also be able to make a claim with their own insurance company if they have a personal injury protection (PIP) policy. A lawyer can review what occurred and the insurance policy to determine all possible paths to compensation.

What Damages Can I Recover?

After an injury, crash victims may be able to recover various damages for the harm they’ve have suffered. These include what are called economic and non-economic damages. Economic damages are actual financial losses such as medical bills and lost wages. Non-economic damages include losses like pain and suffering. Maryland does not impose a cap on economic damages, but, as of 2024, non-economic damages are capped at $950,000.

Additionally, it is important to note that Maryland has a three-year statute of limitations for personal injury claims. This means that if a claim is not resolved in that time, accident victims will need to file a lawsuit within three years of the date of injury to secure their right to compensation. A car accident attorney in Maryland can help determine the statute of limitations and make a timely filing.

Contact a Maryland Car Accident Attorney Today for Assistance

When you’ve been involved in a motor vehicle crash, physical and financial recovery are critical. A Maryland car accident lawyer can help you with your claim, providing legal support and peace of mind.

Were you injured by a careless driver? Reach out today for a case evaluation. Our dedicated car crash lawyer in Maryland can guide you through your claim and work as your advocate.