

Sketchycakes is a liar, a manipulator and is attempting to stretch the truth to make me seem like I am worse than I am. This document is to prove that Sketchy's claims are nothing more than lies and out of context screenshots.

Section 1: First Interactions

I first met Sketchy in the r/htf discord server in around January or February of 2025, when they were about fourteen or so. We got along well due to their impressive artwork. I did notice one thing right off the bat about their art; Touchy. Their OC is, to put it bluntly, really horny. They almost always drew them in sexual poses, whether that be in a bunny girl outfit, drawn as Catherine, and one particular image that stands out where they drew Splendid, but had Touchy awkwardly inserted into the background with a large ass for absolutely no reason at all.

The art made me really uncomfortable, since it was on a server which had a minimum entry age of thirteen, and they were about fourteen or fifteen at the time. But, they seemed like a nice person regardless, and I was willing to put that one flaw aside to try and be friends with them. Absolutely nobody is a complete saint. But depending on what someone did, they can still learn from their mistakes and try to move on from them. Besides, they didn't just draw suggestive artwork, they could draw art that was actually good. So, I became friends with Sketchy and we got along pretty well after that. He drew art, and I learned a bit about drawing from them. Granted, I did not get that better at art, and I did not draw softcore porn, but I was still glad to have Sketchy as a friend.

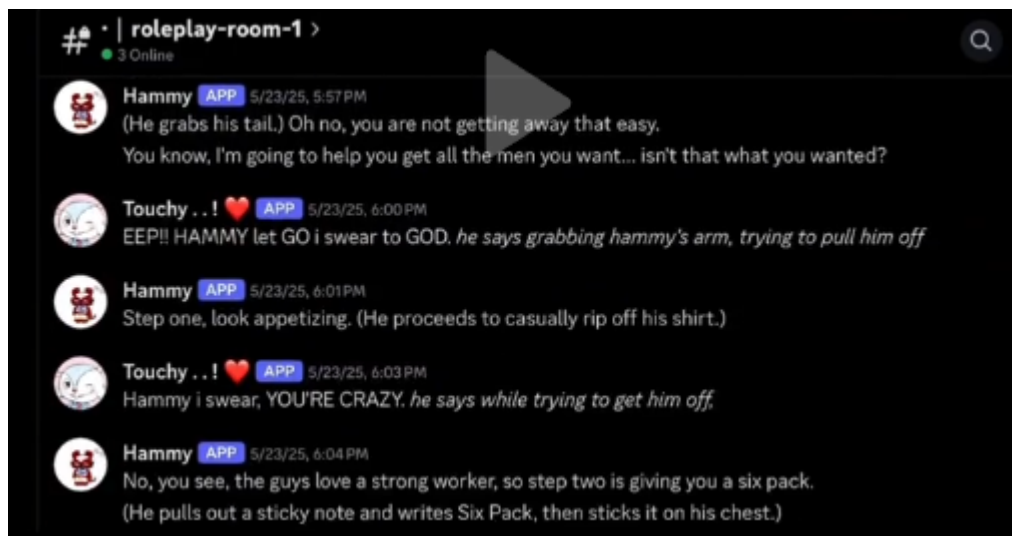

That was, until May 23rd of 2025. I forgot when exactly it happened, but thankfully I was able to track down when it happened and what was exchanged thanks to Sketchy's tiktok, which they blocked me from after everything, but I managed to access via an incognito tab. I should preface that Sketchy's discord servers all had prominent roleplay areas, which were popular and advertised. They helped me make a tupper of Hammy, my OC, whose whole personality was being drunk and unpleasant to be around.

Section 2: The Roleplay Incident

Now I should preface this by saying I deeply regret what I did. Looking back, I should have known Sketchy was uncomfortable with what was occurring in the roleplay. However, for reasons I will get into soon, they did not make that perfectly clear. If they did, I would have stopped right then and there.

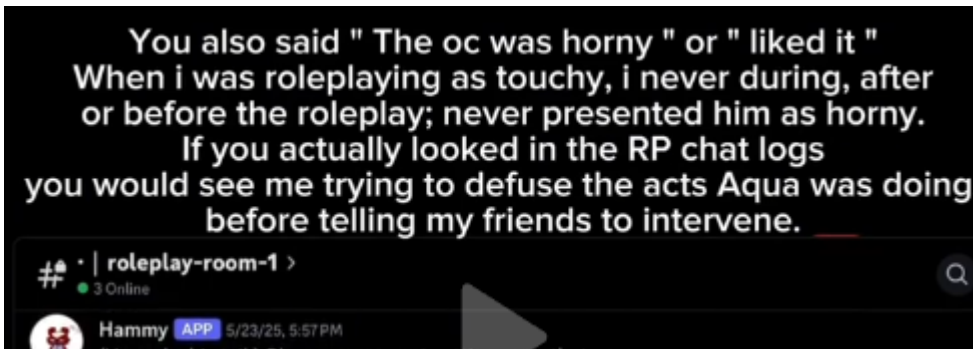

I should also say I was not really interested in roleplaying with Sketchy, since I knew that they would almost certainly roleplay as Touchy, which, as I had said, was just horny, and would probably turn any and all roleplay they get into about them and only them. But I didn't want to seem like I didn't like what Sketchy liked, I wanted to be a good friend. So, I roleplayed.

The roleplay was with Hammy trying to help Touchy get the attraction of men. He did so by ripping his shirt off and putting a sticky note with a six pack on his chest. That's it. That was the whole roleplay. Mildly tame compared to the shit that Sketch usually drew.

This was, as far as anyone would have known, the one and only personality trait that Touchy had. Sketchy had never given him any other traits, or at least, never stated he had any other traits in either artwork or text.

Now, remember earlier when I said that they were uncomfortable with the roleplay and were trying to get out of it? Well I would have understood. If they had done it WITH THEIR ACTUAL ACCOUNT, and not the TUPPER THEY WERE ROLEPLAYING WITH.

Sketchy says on their own TikTok that they never presented Touchy as horny, which is a blatant lie. Unless they want to claim 'freaky 24/7' and 'forever twink' have different meanings.

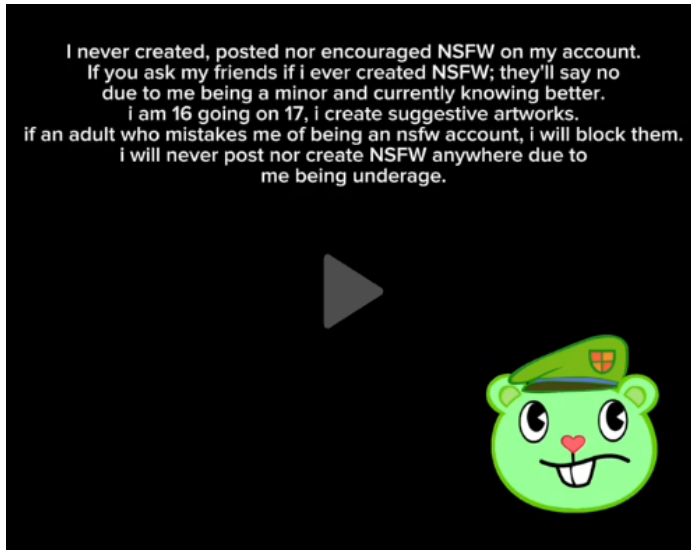

Not only that, but they also say that they were attempting to defuse the acts of Hammy in the roleplay. Now, they clearly did not try to do that, instead having Touchy try to get away from Hammy. While still using the tupper. What they could have done instead was tell me, without using tupper, that they were uncomfortable and wanted to stop. I would have said yes.

I also want to say I never got any sexual gratification during or after the events of this roleplay. It was just roleplay. I identify as asexual, so I don't have any kind of sexual attraction to anyone. I only realized I was asexual near the start of pride month of this year. I was never seeing Sketchy as anything more than a friend.

Section 3: Debunking the Other Claims

I want to take a moment to back up any claims that Sketchy might try and weasel their way out of in the future.

This is a lie. Sketchy has posted NSFW artwork onto their account, and if the images I shared at the start of the document are not proof enough, then there is this.

Regardless of if there are any naughty bits shown, which in this image there aren't, the definition of Not Safe For Work, or NSFW, is when an image is not appropriate to view in a public, academic or workplace setting. This includes things like gore, slurs, and of course pornography. This also includes highly suggestive sexual imagery, which is what Sketchy is clearly drawing and putting on their socials for minors to see.

This is a lie. They knew what they were posting. They also seemed to change their story, because as I had sent in a previous image, they said they never posted NSFW artwork. So which is it?

As for the racism and sexism allegations, I can explain those by saying that those were taken out of context. The messages I sent were from a server me and a couple other friends made called Joyful Shrub Buddies, where we did 18+ dubs of Happy Tree Friends. The jokes we usually did were painting Sniffles as a groomer, who would tell people to kill themselves, and one of the lines said by somebody else, not me, was 'Women can't do crack because they're incapable'. I'm not trying to say any of what I said was right, because it wasn't. I just want to make it clear that I do not actually think these things are true; I am not racist, I am not sexist. If I offended anyone with these jokes, all I can do is apologize and try to do better. That being said, there is one more element that Sketchy has utilized against me. That being a commission that was never finished.

Section 4: The Scam

I have never scammed any of my fans out of commission. On my commission sheet i actually told them that it takes multiple days. If the commission takes longer, ill let them know and see if they want a refund or not.

I can atleast 1 - 2 days depending on the
oc/character complexity

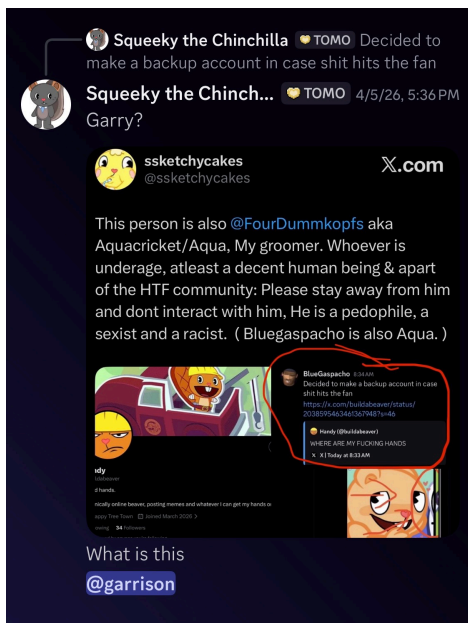

Around a few days before Sketchy cut ties with me out of nowhere, I asked to commission them. They never had me commission them before, but I was wanting to do something nice for a friend. I paid 500 robux, or about five dollars in real money, to have them draw Hammy and Mime drinking soda at the sports pub.

To this day I have not gotten the artwork, or a refund, or any kind of compensation. They hadn't asked if I wanted a refund.

About two days after I commissioned them, they cut ties on all platforms (discord, Tiktok, Roblox) and sent the same response across all of them.

They said not to find or contact them. I accepted that, and did not try to find them since they told me. However, they seem to want to drag things out for longer than they should be a problem for, and made callout posts about my accounts, which I found out about, changed my name, they found that new name out due to a spy they had on me in the form of Garrison (guitarfetish). And now, here we are.

Now that I have presented my side and given evidence, hopefully people will make the decision to not blindly side with the 'victim'. I also want to apologize for not doing this document sooner. I didn't want Sketchy to send their mob after any of my friends at the time. By making this document, I am putting myself at great risk even posting it. But I just want to give clarity, and to hopefully make people hate me a little less.