

A Letter to the President and Cabinet of Singapore:
For the Clemency of Nagaenthran K Dharmalingam

11 November 2021

Dear President Halimah Yacob,

We write to you as members of Singapore's arts industry: visual artists, writers, actors, singers, theatremakers, musicians, dancemakers, filmmakers, curators, technical workers, arts administrators, arts educators, arts students and others. We are, as the National Arts Council states in its vision statement, creators who seek to “inspire our people, connect our communities and position Singapore globally”.

We express our alarm and distress at the state's treatment of Nagaenthran K Dharmalingam, an intellectually disabled man currently awaiting execution at Changi Prison. Together with numerous activists, and the more than 81,000 signatories of this change.org petition, we call for your intervention on his behalf, to commute his death sentence to time served, and to release him to his family.

As you already know, Nagaenthran, a Malaysian national, was only 21 when he was arrested for trafficking diamorphine into Singapore. He committed this offence under coercive circumstances when he sought to borrow money (RM500) for his father's heart operation. Not only has Nagaenthran testified that he refused to transport the drugs, but that he was unaware of the contents of the given package. For his refusal, he was assaulted and threatened with harm to his loved ones, leading him ultimately to commit this implicating act.

Nagaenthran was found during a psychiatric evaluation to have mild ADHD, several cognitive impairments, and an IQ of 69, indicating a mild intellectual disability. His family members have also attested to the severe deterioration of Nagaenthran's mental and cognitive health during the twelve years he has spent on death row. They have shared how he remains highly disoriented, unable to fully comprehend his imminent execution.

As creators of art, we believe deeply in the importance of identifying our common humanity, developing empathy, and ensuring that every person in our society is afforded dignity, including the most downtrodden among us. As the former Minister of Culture, Community and Youth, Grace Fu emphasises, the arts serve us by “broadening our perspectives and enriching our lives”, bringing “people of diverse backgrounds together” and “building strong social bonds.” In this light, we cannot take lightly the state-authorised killing of a person.

Furthermore, the COVID-19 pandemic has reminded us of the precarity and preciousness of life. It strikes us as deeply perverse that the Singapore government is committed to ending the life of a single person in a time when we are struggling to prevent mass death of the population. This irony is made even more glaring given that Nagaenthran’s execution has been placed temporarily on hold after he had tested positive for COVID-19. Surely if the authorities can recognise how inappropriate it is to execute someone in a state of physical sickness, then they must also acknowledge the incongruity of executing a person with an intellectual disability—an act which the United Nations considers to be against international law.

As arts workers, we work ultimately to create and preserve—not destroy. The death sentence placed upon Nagaenthran goes in essence against all that we strive to do. The destruction of life will not bring about the end of drug-related harms, the offenders among whom often hail from marginalised backgrounds and communities. Nagaenthran clearly falls into this category, as someone with limited financial means, is socially marginalised for having a disability, and whose vulnerability has been exploited by other agents of the criminal network. Instead, what is urgently needed is the creation of a more robust and equitable system, one that will attend to the needs of the disenfranchised and vulnerable in ways that will prevent their exploitation. What is essential also is the preservation of strong bonds and relations among family members, peers, and the community—that which may be weakened and ruined by death.

We also know, as cultural ambassadors of Singapore, how the arts stand for our nation's status as a progressive and innovative city, with many of us having helped our country win recognition in the international arts industry. Nagaenthran's impending execution has put a severe dampener on our sense of national pride. In recent weeks, his story has been broadcast across the planet, with coverage from major news sources along with accompanying statements of condemnation from various organisations, experts and other influential individuals. Our nation's treatment of him has become a stain on our global reputation. To show Nagaenthran mercy would be an act that will not only uplift many souls during these troubled times but also provide proof that this is a city where change for the better is possible.

To these ends, we ask earnestly for the President and Cabinet of Singapore to grant Nagaenthran K Dharmalingam clemency. For the better of Singapore and those who inhabit this land, we must work to build and protect, not destroy.

With Love,

The Arts Community of Singapore
