Credit: 1

Grade: 11-12

PEIMS #I3600200

Course #3979

PEIMS #I3600100

Course #3977

Prerequisite/Notes: Application & Portfolio Assessment; $35.00 Fee

The first year of study includes research and art production. Students are required to work in research workbooks and to create a portfolio. The research workbook is a journal of entries developed by the student to record ideas, comments, and preliminary sketches for portfolio pieces. The student's knowledge of art history, art appreciation, and a variety of art cultures is reflected in the work. Studio work is related to the research workbook as well as the student's own self-expression. The second year of study represents the culmination of IB preparation for the advanced art students. The students will continue to develop the research workbook and the portfolio. They will utilize a variety of media as they explore concepts of identity and culture with a global perspective. They will analyze complex visual relationships, produce an original body of work, evaluate and justify design ideas, use knowledge or art history for interpretation and evaluate their work of exhibition. The goal of this course is to prepare the student for a portfolio review and college admission.

Overview – Participation in all band is subject to instructor placement determined by an evaluation of the student’s vocal strengths and music reading ability. All band students are required to participate in rehearsals and performances before and after school, as scheduled. Band students are expected to rent or purchase their own instruments (except for certain instruments provided by the school district) and to purchase their own mouthpieces, reeds, and other accessories. Band is a full year course that is scheduled as a Marching Band for the fall semester and as a Concert Band for the spring semester.

Marching Band – Marching band begins rehearsals in July prior to the beginning of school. During football season, each class rehearses marching routines and football game music. The classes combine to form the marching band which performs at all varsity football games, pep rallies, UIL Marching Contest, selected parades, community activities, and other contests. At the conclusion of football season until the end of the second semester, each class works on music and technique exercises basic to that instrument as well as All-Region Band audition music, solos, and ensembles.

Note: Students will receive an additional physical education substitution credit for the fall semester of marching band not to exceed one full credit.

Dance I introduces the terminology and general principles of dance. Students develop an awareness of the body's movement, using sensory information while dancing, apply body sciences and fitness principles, and develop knowledge and skills of dance elements and choreographic processes in a variety of styles. In Principles of Dance II, students create expressive phrases, explore the role of dance in diverse cultures, and analyze performances. In Principles of Dance III, students explore dance as a vehicle for understanding flexibility, self-discipline, a variety of dance forms, choreography and opportunities in dance as a profession. In Principles of Dance IV, students participate in a conditioning program, which promotes creative expression and performance by strengthening the body's movement. Students will demonstrate refined kinesthetic and spatial awareness by leading peers in practices and performances. Students create original dances, both solos and/or group dances using thematic development. Expectations also include evaluating personal work and the work of others, using a valid rationale and sensitivity toward others. A class uniform is required for all these courses, and students are required to perform in recitals and shows. This course is for a full year, and there may be costs associated with taking this course.

Note: After successful completion of Dance I, students will receive a credit in physical education.

Prerequisite/Notes: 1-year prior dance instruction. In either a public/private school/private studio in 9th or 10th grade with written verification.

The IB Dance course embraces a variety of dance traditions and dance cultures past and present as it looks towards the future. Performance and creative skills are mutually developed as the students create and perform dances and write analytical papers regarding the study. Students will investigate dance as a set of practices with its own histories and theories; experience dance as an individual and collective process; explore traditions and cultures familiar and unfamiliar; and recognize the use of dance to create a dialogue among the various traditions and cultures. The course will facilitate the development of students who may become choreographers, dance scholars, performers as well as those who seek enrichment through dance.

This course explores the past and future of music as a form of communication in an increasingly postmodern world. Music is proving to be more than historical data, theoretical terms, or traditional techniques. Music is proving to be more than an “exotic,” marginalized art form designed for detached observers. Finally, music, is proving to be more than cultural posturing, trendy fads, or sensory saunas. Many believe music may become an integral part of a future nonliteral language. Increasingly, for example, the senses of the body are becoming reliable sources of meaning and “experienced reality.” Whether we wander a musical world or not, the language of sound is responding to the overtones of an increasingly postmodern world, for we are increasingly breaking with a cultural past and bonding with a future presence. This course is offered online through UTPB.
