NONNEGOTIABLE MICHIGAN

October 23, 2026

Dear Dr. El-Sayed,

We are rabbis serving congregations, campuses and communities across the United States. We write in solidarity with our colleagues in Michigan — the rabbis and cantors who launched Nonnegotiable Michigan alongside Jewish Democratic officeholders, party leaders and students — and with the tens of thousands of Jewish Michiganders who stand with them. They have spoken with moral clarity and in good faith. We add our voices to theirs.

Until now, this has been a conversation between you and Michigan's Jewish community. But you are asking to serve in the United States Senate. There, the laws you write, the votes you cast and the words you speak would shape the safety and belonging of Jews throughout America. A senator from Michigan legislates for all of us. And so we write to you, too.

Tomorrow, President Barack Obama joins you in Detroit. You have described your campaign as picking up the baton he carried. We urge you to honor the part of his legacy that made Jewish Americans feel safe in our communities and at home in the Democratic Party.

President Obama never asked American Jews to choose between our progressive values and our Jewish peoplehood. He treated Jewish safety as a federal responsibility, signing the Matthew Shepard and James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act. He respected our right to define our own Jewish identity. His Department of Education recognized that Jews are a people, not only a faith community, and that Title VI protects Jewish, Muslim and Sikh students from harassment based on shared ancestry.

President Obama affirmed Jewish statehood in Israel in word and in deed, concluding the largest security assistance agreement in American history. Arriving in Jerusalem in 2013 to receive the Presidential Medal of Freedom from Israeli President Shimon Peres, he declared that "the dream of true freedom found its full expression in the Zionist idea: to be a free people in your homeland." He welcomed Zionist Jews as full partners in his coalition, and never asked us to leave our love of Israel at the door.

He also pressed Israeli governments, publicly and privately, when he disagreed with them, and championed a Palestinian state living in dignity and security alongside Israel. He saw no contradiction. Leaders can criticize a government without vilifying a people. Leaders must pursue Palestinian freedom without denying or working to dismantle Jewish self-governance and self-determination.

That is the standard President Obama set.

Dr. El-Sayed, we have listened to you in good faith. We heard you say that your commitment to Jewish safety is as deep as your commitment to your own children. We heard you express regret for your words after the horrifying attack on Temple Israel in West Bloomfield. But our tradition teaches that teshuvah — true repentance — requires naming the harm and turning away from it.

Regretfully, that is not what we have seen. You have said people are "too focused on 4 words," yet your comment that "hurt people hurt people," which felt like justification for the Temple Israel attack, remains on your campaign website. Asked about our safety here at home, you offer warm words about Jews and Judaism, but immediately pivot to Israel and foreign wars. Where President Trump blames immigrants for our country's woes, your rhetoric casts Israel and Americans who care about Israel — which includes most of mainstream Jewry — as the source of our neighbors' pain. It traffics in the same Israel-related antisemitism that has made us so vulnerable in the first place, creating a permission structure for the vilification of Jews, and ultimately, violence against us.

Jewish safety means more than physical protection from the next attack. It means rhetoric and policy that recognize how antisemitism takes hold and spreads. But you have called Israelis "bloodthirsty," echoing the blood libel. You describe American support for Israel as "legalized bribery" and "purchased loyalty," echoing the oldest conspiracy theories about Jewish money and control. You have said that a Jewish state is inherently illiberal, and suggested that Zionists — like all of us — cannot truly be progressives. Just this week, you told a national audience that Israel takes American money to push our country into wars. When such words reach a national audience, Jews across America feel the consequences — in our inboxes, on our campuses and, even, painfully, within our sanctuaries.

For the overwhelming majority of American Jews, our bond with the people, land and state of Israel is not a policy position. It is faith, family, history, peoplehood and safety. Our Michigan colleagues asked you six weeks ago to affirm that plainly. They are still waiting, and we now join them in urging you to take our communal needs seriously.

We stand with our Michigan colleagues in affirming the five nonnegotiables:

1. Jewish safety, including for Zionist Jews, is nonnegotiable — in Michigan and across America.
2. Jewish statehood in Israel is nonnegotiable. The Jewish people's right to self-determination in our ancestral homeland is not up for debate, even when its politics are.
3. Jews, and Jews alone, define Jewish identity. No political movement may decide for us who counts as an authentic or a "good" or "bad" Jew.
4. Zionist Jews must be welcome as full participants in the Democratic Party and in American political life.
5. Palestinian aspirations for safety, dignity and freedom must be pursued alongside Israel, not in place of it.

These are not special demands of you alone, and they do not expire on Election Day. They are the standard that any Democratic candidate or elected official must meet to earn our communities' trust and votes — this year, in 2028, and beyond. None places any Israeli government beyond criticism. None diminishes the dignity of Palestinians, or the safety of our Muslim neighbors, which is bound up with our own.

So our request is simple. When you stand beside President Obama in Detroit, say these five things publicly, in your own words. And then demonstrate through your words and actions that you mean them. Jewish safety cannot be something you invoke when speaking to Jews, but undermine when speaking to everyone else.

And to President Obama, whose friendship to our community we do not doubt, even when we disagree: please use your voice in Detroit to remind the coalition you built that Jews belong in it fully, safely and proudly. That includes the many of us deeply and inextricably connected to Israel. We are not walking away from that coalition. We intend to stay in it, and we believe that our values will win.

NONNEGOTIABLE MICHIGAN

Rabbi Hillel taught: If I am not for myself, who will be for me? And if I am only for myself, what am I? And if not now, when? We are speaking up for our people. We are standing with our neighbors in a dangerous moment for our country and our world. And with Election Day less than two weeks away, the time is now.

With hope and resolve,
