

DianaStarr Raynell Robinson

DianaStarr Raynell Robinson, is a tiny dancer from Tacoma, Washington. Dancing since the age of 2 years old, she has always loved to express herself through movement. DianaStarr has been choreographing her own routines since the age of 5 years old. Training has always been a vital part of her dance life. The day she was born, her mom would stretch her and teach her at home until she could train in a studio. Tacoma City Ballet, is where she got her first initial training from 2016-2017, then she joined Tacoma Urban Performing Arts Center(TUPAC) in 2017-2018. In late 2018, DianaStarr auditioned for Pacific Northwest Ballet and has continued her training in Balanchine technique. In 2021, DianaStarr and another black ballerina, were the first two, black ballerinas to be casted as Clara in the same year, in The Nutcracker, which made history. Also, she is a brand ambassador for Brown Girls Do Ballet and Blendz Apparel. DianaStarr hopes to become professional ballerina one day and open a studio for underprivileged dancers.

Instagram www.instagram.com/starrlight07

Facebook <https://www.facebook.com/Starrlight07>