

Hi Tom,

How are you? It was nice to hear from you and feel that you trust in my criteria about computer issues. I'd love to advise you. After receiving your letter I looked into some magazines and I've two options that they'd be suitable for you.

On ^ one hand, The Computer Centre has a very good reputation as school. Apart from that, you can learn individually, away from crowded classes. Besides, there are a wide range of courses. Personally I think that this aspect is very important because I'm sure that there's one that matches ~~with~~ your budget!

On the other hand, IT Training Centre offers other kind of advantages. The courses are specially tailored for student's necessities and all kinds of knowledge. Another good thing is that you could get a discount as student which is interesting for your pocket!

In my opinion, if I were you I'd choose The Computer Centre because you could learn at your own pace, quicker than the rest of students. Plus, if you chose a short course, you'd save money.

Must go now. Please, break down both option and let me know what you decide.
Both are good centres but the first one is a little more suitable for your circumstances.

Hope to hear from you soon.

Hi Tom,

How are you? It was nice to hear from you and feel that you trust in my experience about computer issues. I'd love to advise you. After receiving your letter I flicked through some magazines and I've found two options which could be suitable for you.

On the one hand, The Computer Centre has a very good reputation as school. In addition, you can learn individually, away from crowded classes. Besides, there are a wide range of courses. Personally I think that this aspect is very important because I'm sure that there's one that matches your budget!

On the other hand, IT Training Centre offers another kind of advantages. The courses are specially tailored for student's necessities and all sort of knowledges. Another good feature is that you could get a discount as student which would be easy on your pocketbook!

In my opinion, the most appropriate option for you is The Computer Centre because you could learn at your own pace, quicker than the rest of students. Plus, if you chose a short course, you'd save money.

I must go now. Please, think about my suggestions and let me know what you decide.
Both are good centres but the first one is probably a little more suitable for your circumstances.

Hope to hear from you soon.

Hi Tom,

How are you? It was nice to hear from you and feel that you trust in my experience about computer issues. I'd love to advise you. After receiving your letter I flicked through some magazines and I've found two options which could be suitable for you.

On the one hand, The Computer Centre has a very good reputation as school. In addition, you can learn individually, away from crowded classes. Besides, there are a wide range of courses. Personally I think that this aspect is very important because I'm sure that there's one that matches your budget!

On the other hand, IT Training Centre offers other kind of advantages. The courses are specially tailored for student's necessities and all sorts of knowledge. Another good feature is that you could get a discount as student which is interesting because you could cut corners!

In my opinion, I'd choose The Computer Centre because you could learn at your own pace, quicker than the rest of students. Plus, if you chose a short course, you'd save money.

I must go now. Please, think about my suggestions and let me know what you decide.
Both are good centres but the first one is probably a little more suitable for your circumstances.

Hope to hear from you soon.