

Context: I've seen about every single post on his social media, and he always starts with: Hi Quants, so that's the reason I start with Hi. I sought the whole internet for his name, but couldn't find it.

Hi Mr. Quant,

Since a little while, I've been trying to figure out how stocks work and how to invest in general, so I was scouring Youtube for some quality investing advice.

I saw the video you made about calculating the intrinsic value of a stock. The way you explained the importance of cash flow helped me figure out better on what things I should pay attention to before buying a stock.

So, I've taken a quick look at your site to see what more you had to offer. There I saw your course: QuantProgram Prometheus Offer.

While the layout of the site looks clean in general, the product description of your course has some room for improvement. If you would provide extra information in the description about how the content in the course would help the customer, instead of just the content, it makes you more of an authority figure and that makes people want to buy the Prometheus Offer faster.

So, because I like what you're doing in terms of teaching the importances of trading in stocks, I've made an improved product description for your Prometheus offer.

I've put the product description in this email.

If you find this interesting, I would love to show you more ways for your business to grow using effective strategies, like advertising on social media. Just shoot me a reply if you are interested!

Cheers,

Danylo

Although the layout of the site looks clean in general, the product description of your course has some room for improvement. If you would provide extra information in the description about how the content in the course would help the customer, instead of just the content, it makes you more of an authority figure and that makes people want to buy the Prometheus Offer faster.