Last Revised: 25 May 2020

Andiano Lab Games ("Andiano Lab Games", "we") are committed to protecting your Personal Data. We offer services and games that can collect information from you and your children, so we have prepared a document called the Privacy Policy. In this Privacy Policy, we will explain what we do with the Personal Data that you provide to us or which we can collect from you in the provision of services to you.

This Privacy Policy is in compliance with the US Children's Online Privacy Protection Act (COPPA) and the European General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR).

While you visit our website at minimalgames.unity@gmail.com or you play Andiano Lab Games("Services" or "Games"), we may collect information about you ("Personal Data"). We care about your Personal Data protection, so we have developed this Privacy Policy. 3. WHAT PERSONAL DATA WE COLLECT?

I do not collect any information through or about the usage of my games whatsoever. I used to collect anonymous usage statistics to help me improve my game, but in the light of the European GPDR, I decided I did not wanted to annoy my players with a consent popup, so I removed all forms of analytics from all of my games. I also disable and disallow any plugins I use to create my games to collect any anonymous data.

Unity, one of the game engines I use, implements an interface on Android to request a device's Android Device ID and the Advertising ID. I don't use these interfaces in my games whatsoever, and have confirmed with Unity that the data that could be requested from these interfaces isn't used by Unity internally either and never leaves your device.
