

Hello Professor xxxx,

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Library collections and services are now available online only. Unfortunately, we are unable to provide any new PDF scans of Library materials at this time. All PDFs delivered to you via Box over the current and past academic years are still available to you and you are free to pull PDFs from one class' Box to use in all the others during the instructional continuity period. We will forward any request we receive for books that need scanning to our colleagues in Library Copyright to see if an eBook is available for purchase or if there are other options for obtaining the requested material.

We no longer can add new media to Sharestream. During the instructional continuity period, we are happy to provide access to all media already available in Sharestream if it is not available on another platform. Those titles that are not available in Sharestream will also be sent to Library Copyright to see if there are streaming options available elsewhere.

Even though our building is closed, we are available online to support your teaching, research and scholarship. We have librarians available weekdays on Live Chat to answer your questions and assist in any way we can. To connect to Live Chat or any of our other library services, visit our Ask Us page.

For the latest update, please visit the COVID-19 Updates and Resources page in our home library website.

Please send questions for Library Copyright to librarycopyright@georgetown.edu.

Thank you for your patience and understanding during these challenging times.

Be well,

Access Services Department
