Artist Statement

When certain aspects are removed or altered, it forces the viewer to disassociate from the "familiarity" of the object, thus sparking creative interest and curiosity. Fractureism can spark a lot of emotions (confusion, curiosity, etc.), but if it catches your attention, then the intended job was completed. Art is all around us, but who's to say what is and isn't art? Fractureism is my visual language - a response to a world that seems lost and to have forgotten its way, fixated on the need to constantly compare versus standing out and being an individual; a style that continues to break and bend the rules, revealing a truth that most overlook.
