

LETTERS TO

12/09/19, from Tom Mead

Re: Wet burrito

I'm from Michigan, and yes — Michigan is probably not a true Mexican-food mecca, but... When I visit my ancient hippy friends just south of Traverse City (in northwest Michigan) — we invariably resume our quest for northwest Michigan's best “wet burrito” — which is kind of a disgusting name, but that's what we/they say...

Another way to say it is: “bean burrito, enchilada style” (or beef or chicken, etc. etc.).

Beer helps, and beano...

— Tom

In response to:

Seriously? Chicken samosas and barbecue chicken pizza? After crunching the numbers on orders from over 21 million users on its platform, GrubHub has come out with a list of the most-ordered food items in each of the 50 states. Looks like NH has a yen for Indian food, and VT for cheesier fare. Of course, in Oregon it was fried tofu and in Michigan something called a wet burrito. Nationally, the single most-ordered food was cauliflower pizza, followed by spicy brussels sprouts. Okaaay...