

Language-learning Resources

If there is a language-learning resource you have found helpful or use regularly, add it under one of the categories below.

Your entry should look like this:

BBC 6-minute English: Why we forget the things we learn

Many people find it hard to remember things they've read or learned while other, sometimes useless, information sticks with them. Georgina and Rob talk about memory as they teach you related vocabulary.

,All-in-one

<https://learnenglish.britishcouncil.org/>

This website offers practising everything you would like to - listening, writing, reading, speaking, grammar and vocabulary. It is pretty interactive, there is a ton of videos which help you with the improvement and also a lot of tips in every 'lesson' you choose to take.

Vendula Hájková
Kateřina Borůvková

<https://www.englisch-hilfen.de/en/>

This website offers English grammar, vocabulary, exercises, tests, and games. You can improve your grammar skills, expand your vocabulary, prepare for exams, or just play games. You will find here vocabulary lists, grammar explanations, idioms, useful phrases, and over 1,000 exercises.

Natálie Nikodemová
Tamara Ludvigová

<https://www.espressoenglish.net/>

This website offers everything you need to practise (grammar, vocabulary, phrases and much more.)

Espresso English is clear and practical.

I use this website regularly. You can find everything there (grammar, vocabulary, reading,...). It is divided and well arranged. I use the grammar part. There is always a good explanation and some exercises. I really like these exercises, because when I complete that exercise it shows right and wrong answers, but also an explanation. I really like these explanations. It really helps me.

www.thesaurus.com This website mainly focuses on providing synonyms and antonyms. However, it also contains grammar tips, word games and a dictionary.

Grammar

<https://app.grammarly.com/> This app is very helpful with writing. Whenever you will write a document or essay or anything else, it will warn you if there is some mistake or give you ideas on how to replace some words with other alternatives. You can add it into the app you are writing in.

Dictionaries

Seznam Slovník Much better than offline dictionaries. Shows the context of the word and pronunciation, and when it comes to translating verbs, you can see their forms in different time clauses - very helpful for German, too.

Patricie Bartošová

<https://slovniky.lingea.cz/anglicko-cesky> The Lingea translator is mostly more accurate than the google translator. What I love about the Lingea dictionary is that it lists several meanings of the word and sometimes examples of the use of the word in a phrase. There are many languages available, not just English.

Thesaurus isn't a dictionary as we know it, but it still helps to broaden your vocabulary. Imagine you are writing a text, and you notice you use the same word (e.g. important), and you cannot think of any synonyms just put "important" into the Thesaurus, and it'll give you lots of synonyms and other tips.

Pronunciation

Reading

<https://www.newsinlevels.com>

Website that provides you interesting news in 3 different levels of English, based on your language skills. Articles also contain word explanations for more complicated phrases.

I really like audiobooks. You can read text and listen to pronunciation. There are many levels. From beginner to advanced.

Anna Novotná

<https://www.newsinlevels.com>

I like this website because I can choose the text level.

Listening

TED talks

https://ed.ted.com/?utm\_source=google.com&utm\_medium=organic

You can find here many videos related to a topic you are interested in. Each video has a lesson that includes questions to check the understanding of the video and also links to explore more about the topic. Most of the videos are really short, so you can watch it twice if you need. I found here many videos related to special education.

Mooveez is an application from Czech creators that teaches foreign languages through movies and TV series. Students come into contact with authentic language and build their passive vocabulary. The selection includes carefully chosen works that are linguistically diverse and enrich vocabulary as much as possible (such as Pulp Fiction or The Godfather). Each film comes with a transcript of the dialogue in the target language as well as in Czech, and you can easily navigate between each sentence and replay them as many times as you need.
