

THIS DOCUMENT IS DESIGNATED CLEARANCE LEVEL

BEEP

Researcher L: Day. twenty first. Month. August. Year. 20██.

Assistant █: clear throat Right, we have brought this specimen from another dimension...

It strongly resembles our A-1 operatives but claims to be from “Alpha-9” and that it “needs to get back to the fridge”.

Researcher L: whispers We have not been put into the loop on this one.

Researcher S: chuckles in the background

short pause

Researcher L: Anyways! We have been told that SCP is “unstable” and it is our job to fix that... I guess the only way is to do our job and test him.

tape ends

beep

Researcher L: Test: 1. Increase of anomalous matter.

My associate will explain.

Researcher S: The thought we’ve had here is that if it is unstable, maybe adding more matter will improve it.

Researcher L: in the background Ladies first.

Researcher S: picks up syringe gun filled with anomalous matter and hands it to a D-class

D-2483: walks up to the SCP and tires to inject it

SCP: Picks up D-Class

Everyone: uh-oh.

SCP: State your intentions.

D-2483: uhhh, I just wanted to give you this medicine!

SCP: A chemical donation?

D-2483: y-yeah!

SCP: Understood. Takes injection vile out and stores it in pockets and places down the D-Class

Researcher L: Well, that one didn’t work.

end of tape

beep

Researcher S: Our next attempt will be removing mass.

Researcher L: whispers Tests 2~

Researcher S: sighs

end of tape

beep

Researcher S: annoyed Test 2. Removal of mass.

Plan; D-Class will be equipped with containment beams, and reality anchors trying to stabilize the entity.

over intercom Begin.

D-Class Start to put down anchors and use the containment beams on the SCP

SCP: Starts screaming and attacks the D-Class

D-1107: F████ I dont want to do this man!

D-9845: Stop crying! They told me we can hang out with that blob thing when we do a good job.

SCP: Falls to the ground after taking out a few D-Class

Researcher L: The SCP has stopped moving.

Researcher S: in a questioning manner And it shrunk?

Researcher L: It did indeed shrink, we will deal with the D-Class and take the SCP to a different room.

Assistant █████: in the background Thank you, but I will be taking over.

gas valves open

end of tape

beep

Researcher S: clears throat This is Executive Researcher █████, this recording has the purpose of finalizing my notes on the current project and informing the council of its outcome.

Firstly, the subject has not shown any abnormal activity and has been behaving with the expected parameters. After the stabilization efforts, as noted the subject has “compacted” shrinking in size slightly, since then we have kept interacting with the subject improving its speech patterns and understanding of its surroundings.

After its involvement in several attacks on Floor-3, it is to be noted that the superior damage resistance has decreased, currently, it behaves slightly above average in combat but has the upside of not being constrained by human restrictions like fatigue and hunger.

After sustaining too much damage the subject will collapse and go into a mending state where it is unresponsive for a certain period.

In conclusion, the subject offers a great opportunity for field usage but is not valuable enough to be seen as a trump card, following security upgrades on Floor-3 overwriting its objective to assist Alpha-1 or be a personal guard to the Council would seem like the best use of the opportunity given to us.

end of tape