

Imperial Fire

Blog:

Theme: 3/5

Creativity/Originality: 4/5

Presentation: 4/5

Aesthetic: 3/5

Execution: 4/5

Notes:

I enjoyed that the fanfic was connected along with what was presented throughout most of the blog. I did think that the format of the template used was a bit awkward since there was four to five words at the end of one line and three to four at the start of the other. I understand if it was used to cover the potential bare spots within the blog. Another thing that bothered me was that the picture wouldn't match with the background color of the blog. I understand if the picture had a transparent background but some were white. I'm not sure if it was due to having limited time. I'm terms of obsession I don't think the theme was that evident in the blog aside from the edits that were more towards the end but it's understandable since the team seemed to have a different and more original approach.

Editing:

Theme: 5/5

Creativity/Originality: 3/5

Presentation: 3/5

Technique: 4/5

Composition: 3/5

Notes:

the edits followed the theme perfectly thought i feel like the first ones doesn't quite follow the other's themes. they're obviously obsession related and the background matches with the colors along with the font used for 'wanted', this digital effect really suits them. but in my opinion i would've made the pngs smaller so there would've been more space to add some elements to complement the edit since it looks a bit poor. the second ones look very pretty and neat and i like the gif used along with the contrast on the other one. though the first one looks kinda oversaturated because both pngs are placed so near from each other it doesn't leave any free space to appreciate better the gif in the background. the last edit looks good and neat with the contrast between exo and x-exo and the fonts are well used! my only problem would be the tiny exo png at the top left corner, it's a bit unnecessary and it makes the edit look too full.

Art/Crafts:

Theme: 4/5

Creativity/Originality: 5/5

Presentation: 3/5

Technique: 5/5

Color and Value: 4/5

Notes:

First off, I want to commend the uniqueness of the fanarts! Instead of explicitly making each fanart Obsession-themed, I like how they were created to follow the narrative of the Obsession fanfic. The comic tug on my heart strings uwu it was just so cute! I like how each character was easily identifiable. The Baekhyun portrait was really well done as well; the proportions look great and the eyes look uber sparkly~ Although the fanarts were simply fantastic, the way they were cropped in the blog unfortunately cut off the top and bottom. I understand that the blog was trying to follow the Twitter format for displaying images, but I wish there was at least a link to the full fanarts so I could admire them in all their glory. I feel like the Baekhyun portrait could also use some more shading in the neck region~ Personally, I was confused why the Baekhyun in the portrait didn't resemble Baekhyun of X-EXO (white hair, leathery outfit; etc). According to the Twitter post, the portrait was supposed to be a police drawing/mugshot of the supposed "culprit", so I think a straight-on/frontal view rather than a ¾ view would have illustrated this concept better. Ahhh wips weren't included, so I had to take off points for that too T^T Nonetheless, you guys did awesome! Y'all should be proud of yourselves bc I'm over here fangirling so hard <3

Writing:

Theme: 5/5

Creativity/Originality: 5/5

Presentation: 5/5

Grammar: 5/5

Vocabulary: 4/5

Notes:

I honestly loved how they set up the entire story and included the tweets, which made it much more fun to read it. The story is unique and I love how it goes well with their theories, I couldn't stop reading it. There was some good vocabulary here and there and the grammar was also good. So far one of the best one shot's I have read.