

DCRL Personal Streaming Rules/Guidelines

Disclaimer: These rules are mainly applicable to streaming any DCRL game as a spectator. If you are streaming your personal POV of your game, you do not need an on-screen overlay of any sort if it's your personal POV. The other rules/guidelines still apply.

Any one person can take it upon themselves to stream any DCRL game, with the consent of the players and the following in mind:

- Personal DCRL streams need to be taken seriously.
  - DCRL proudly has strong connections with many school clubs/eSports teams and any unnecessary issues between our participants due to a streamer's behavior on stream needs to be avoided . When anything is being streamed for DCRL, the streamer/caster duo is not only representing the school that they attend, but also all of the other schools that partake in DCRL.
  - "Personal Streams" can be more lighthearted and loose compared to the "main channel", but there should be no slandering, disrespect, or anything nefarious towards any one team or member on the field.
    - Remember that it may be funny to you/others, but not to the person/team being targeted.
  - The streamer must stay neutral when casting any specific series, and give their due diligence to stray away from any bias they contain towards any one team.
  - The VODs for these series are still going to be watched back by the teams that play in the streamed games. No one wants to watch back a VOD of a losing series while also listening to the streamer/caster also talk down on them.
- On screen graphics
  - At the absolute minimum, the stream should contain on-screen text next to the scoreboard that shows which color is which team. The series score should also be displayed next to the team names as well.

- A perfect example of this can be seen below:

We do truly appreciate anyone that is willing to take time out of their own day to put DCRL games up for everyone to see; it makes playing DCRL league games that much more intense and enjoyable! If there are any questions or concerns regarding personal streams for DCRL, be sure to just reach out to any admin on the Discord server ( <https://discord.gg/8JA7SXsfUv> ) and everyone would be glad to help!