

SL: quick question, (name)

I found your channel after watching your video on the pistol squat form, it really caught my attention and I've been learning so much from your content ever since.

As I delved deeper into your business, I noticed some areas where I think you could improve your sales page to better connect with your audience. I truly believe that by making a few tweaks, you could convert even more of your viewers into high-paying customers.

By leveraging the pain points of your audience's current fitness struggles, you could create a more emotional impact and motivate them to take positive action towards your brand. I've even created an avatar of your ideal customer to help guide you in this process.

If you don't use this tool to your advantage, you are missing out on one of the most potent ways that you could push your audience to take positive action towards your brand.

If you like it, we could hop on a quick call and discuss other tweaks that could be implemented to increase your sales for your business.

If this is something you would be interested in please let me know.

Link