

PM Team 5 (Scholarly Deliverables Planning)

Lab Notebook

7/9/18

Mission statement:

We take WE1S to be a seed project that will generate, interface, and complement ongoing research undertaken by team members and a larger scholarly community. Our goal is to encourage these projects and to scaffold them into the WE1S project's larger research output, both by providing a portal for potential interlocutors and by providing a venue for advertising work.

Goals and Deliverables:

Possible research output formats might include:

- Blog posts
- Articles
- Conference proceedings
- Lectures
- Syllabi
- Workshops

Possible areas of investigation include:

- Identifying conferences, journals, and grant agencies that would be amenable/receptive to the project's goals
- Imagining scholarly outputs in the form of blog posts, articles, conference panels and presentations, and other publications that allow project participants to share their research and work on the project
- Producing language for the WE1S interpretation protocol; imagining ways to situate WE1S in the context of other disciplines and methodologies (e.g. corpus linguistics, political science, and film and media studies); and producing a blog on the WE1S public site that can serve as a platform for blog posts, reports, etc. produced by project participants.

We also aim to implement a strategy for participants to act as “group ethnographers” while working in their respective AM and PM teams, documenting what group decisions were made on a given day for the benefit of the 2018 summer camp and future participants in years two and three of the project, and documenting workflows (for example, a workflow on how to use the WMS), which can be used as guides for future participants, provide foundations for scholarly deliverables in journals and conferences, and eventually contribute to the write-up at the project's conclusion.
