Narrator - Vanya: Once upon a time, long long ago, there was a flock of pigeons that flew here and there, in search of food. The Flock was led by their Noble King

Narrator - Aayaan: Once it so happened that the flock flew for a very long distance, and they were very tired. The King dove encouraged the doves to fly a little longer

Dove - Shiven: I will fly a little further and look for a place to rest. I found a large shady tree. And there is also a little rice spread under that beautiful tree.

King Dove - Shrikar: Lets go to that tree and take some rest

Narrator - Aayaan: As they landed under the tree, hoping to enjoy the cool shade of the tree and eat & rest, they realized that a net just fell over them and they were all trapped

Narrator - Vanya: The doves fluttered their wings hard, to free themselves, but they were stuck. Just then they saw the hunter walking towards them from far, who had laid the net in the first place. He appeared to be quite happy at such a large catch of birds trapped inside the net.

Hunter - Abhinav: Wow. What a good catch today. Seems like I have caught many birds in my net. Let me get there fast, take them to the market and make a lot of money today.

Dove - Shiven: Oh God what will I do now? How are we going to free ourselves?

King Dove - Shrikar: Do not worry my friends. We should stay united and think intelligently. To get free from the net, all of us should hold the net in our beaks and all of us fly up together. Once we start flying away from this hunter, we will figure out what to do next later. Now come on and fly, fly, fly

Narrator - Pradyumna: Following the King's order, each dove picked up a portion of the huge net and started to fly higher and faster leaving the hunter shocked

Hunter - Abhinav: What is happening? How is my net flying away? Is this some kind of magic or did the birds just get a boon from Lord Hanuman? "Come back, Come back". Waa... Waa... Hey Stop Hey Stop...

Narrator - Pradyumna: The Birds flew over those hills away from the hunter.

Dove - Shiven: I can see that the hunter has slowed down and he is tired trying to run up the hill

King Dove - Shrikar: Now we all have to get out of this net, There is a mouse who lives in the nearby hill. He is a good friend of mine. Lets go to him for help

Mouse - Kanisha: Oh why such a big flock of pigeons is flying towards me. They are going to catch me in their net and take me away. Let me hide fast. I will not let them take me away and make a meal out of me.

King Dove - Shrikar: Dear friend mouse, it is me the king dove. We are in great difficulty and need your help

Mouse - Kanisha: Sorry friend when I saw such a huge flock of birds I was scared they had come to attack me. Let me start by setting you free

King Dove - Shrikar: No dear. First free my followers. A king cannot keep his subjects in pain and set himself free first.

Mouse - Kanisha: Oh King you are so noble. You are worried about your subjects first.

Dove - Shiven: And mouse you are a good friend who has come to help his friend when he is in need.

Narrator - Pradyumna:

So the mouse set about nibbling the nets of all the followers and finally the king set all the birds free. So you see what did we learn from this story:
