

I want to be the definition of greatness.

The best version of myself possible.

When people shake my hand I want them to feel intimidated.

I want them to feel that I am better than them in every human metric possible.

When they hear the name of Santuan I want some to be absolutely terrified and some to have a smile on their face.

No in-between.

I want to be the hero of the people I truly care about.

And to inspire men like me who feel miserable because they are stuck.

I want to destroy people who have wronged me and people like them.

I want to be a person that inspires greatness by leading by example.