See Beyond The Obvious And Maximize Your Ability To Consciously Generate Luck

What is luck?

Most would agree on some lucky events.

You find some money on the street.

You bump into a gorgeous guy or lady at the supermarket, the conversation goes beautifully and next thing you know, you're in love.

You buy a stock on a whim, and it triples in price within weeks.

You nail every single question on the job interview of your life and launch your dream career.

You're driving down a busy street, but every single light is green.

These events, when they happen, feel fantastic.

But there are a few problems with these lucky events.

One is that they don't happen nearly enough.

Two is, while feel good, they also feel out of our control.

Sure it's great when you get a feeling that the universe is conspiring to help you succeed.

But it kind of sucks when the universe is taking its own sweet time.

Part of the allure of luck is it feels like a gift.

A present.

Given to us by an unseen, yet infinitely powerful universal force.

But what if this was only the tip of the iceberg?

What if luck was much deeper, much more complex, and even better much more under our control?

Nobody would feel unlucky if they found a hundred dollar bill on the street.

In fact, a hundred dollar bill was right there on the sidewalk, it wouldn't be for long.

It would end up in the pocket of the first LUCKY person who saw it.

This is the problem with luck.

Things that are lucky to us are lucky to everybody.

Things we consider lucky are not only out of our control, but they are very, very blatant.

It doesn't take a lot of skill to see a hundred dollar bill.

When you hit a bunch of green lights in a row, it feels nice.

But it also doesn't feel like it's under your control.

In fact, when things like this happen, we start to worry that we'll do something wrong.

Something that will JINX our good luck streak.

As if this mysterious universe that is allegedly conspiring against us will take it away if we make one wrong move.

But what if luck is much more complex?

What if luck is like those 3D images that first look like noise.

That take a bit of patience.

That take a bit of visual calibration.

But once you train your eyes to see beneath the surface, there is a lot more going on here.

A lot more going on that most will ever realize.

It's commonly understood that the difference between all the data hitting our senses and the data we can consciously perceive is huge.

When something important happens, it temporarily shifts our filters.

We see things we didn't see before.

A red car.

Pregnant ladies and anything related to childhood.

Anything that might look like food if you are hungry.

This is a cool feeling, but it's not much help.

It's temporary, and like finding money, kind of out of our control.

We want to change our filters on purpose.

Not just change what they can perceive, but how deeply they can perceive.

Fortunately, this is very, very easy.

Because guess who chooses what we see, beyond all the noise and potential opportunities that usually bypass our conscious awareness?

We do, that's who.

When we buy a red car, we see red cars.

But once we get used to our red car, we no longer see red cars.

We want a more strategic approach.

A more long lasting approach.

Seeing red cars is only the surface.

We don't just want to see things, we want to see potential opportunities.

Opportunities that will lead to more lasting income and financial benefits.

Opportunities that will lead to more romantic, sexual and emotional benefits.

Opportunities that will lead to more social benefits.

That is exactly what this course will teach you.

How, specifically, to recalibrate your mind so you see much, much more than just what's on the surface.

How to see much more deeply into the reality that is always around us.

That is around you right now.

Specific Exercises

You'll learn plenty of exercises that will steadily increase your luck finding capability.

How to program your subconscious so you will find things that will lead you to more opportunities.

Opportunities that you can leverage for lasting benefits.

This does require some thinking on your part.

Non-thinking, and non-participating luck is not what we are after.

We are after the kind of luck that responds to your thought.

The kind of luck that responds to your calibrated desires and wishes.

The kind of luck that creates those wonderful self-fulfilling prophecies.
