

Photos from the Middle Fork of Taylor Creek Hike on Friday, October 10

The water levels for Taylor Creek weren't very high at this time due to the continuing drought. For the most part the weather cooperated and short of a little light drizzling from time to time and one heavier drizzle that lasted a few minutes (we hid under a tree). The scenery was of course quite wonderful; all nestled within towering Zion-Canyon-like walls. The "pièce de résistance" of the hike, the Double Alcove Arch, was as majestic as ever. Really nice hike!

Click on the following links for photos:

Kolob Canyons - Middle Fork of Taylor Creek - 10-10-25

Group Photo Middle Fork of Taylor Creek 10-10-25

Kolob Canyons - Taylor Creek Flowers 10-10-25